Cut to Force 1,000,000 Off WPA, Fear Of Roosevelt

Adams Differs, Sets Total at 600,000 As Senate Group Favors House Bill

By Robert C. Albright.

President Roosevelt warned yesterday that the $150,000,000 House cut in his $875,000,000 deficiency relief estimates would throw more than 1,000,000 persons off WPA rolls and indirectly deny relief to between 4,000,000 and 5,000,000.

The President's estimate was challenged by Chairman Adams of the Senate Appropriations sub-committee, which today will conclude Senate hearings on the bill.

Adams said Works Progress Administrator F. C. Harrington told the subcommittee the House slash would force only 600,000 off the rolls, under two proposed methods of distributing the reduction.

Committee Favors Cut

"I am not contending with the President," Adams told reporters. "I am merely stating the facts as told to us. It seems to me a matter of simple mathematics. Of course, if the present relief load were maintained through the winter months, the cut when made would be more severe and in that case would reach more than 1,000,000."

The Colorado Senator maintained a gradual reduction of rolls through the winter and spring would spread relief funds and reduce the total number of displacements. He said between 500,000 and 600,000 WPA workers usually are laid off between January and June, and this number of lay-offs need not be exceeded this year. He declared that PWA contracts totaling $1,500,000,000 "are just taking hold" and should further ease the relief load.

The President defended his $875,000,000 relief estimate at a press conference, as the Senate subcommittee appeared to be swinging in favor of the $725,000,000 figure approved by the House.

Russell Defends House

Appeals for restoring the $150,000,000 slash, and for adding to the President's figure, meanwhile were made to the sub-committee by a series of witnesses, including Mayor LaGuardia of New York. President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, wrote a letter to Adams urging restoration of the full $875,000,000.

A lively clash between Senator Russell (Democrat), of Georgia, and David Lasser, head of the Workers Alliance, left wing relief labor group, marked the Senate hearing.

Russell stopped the testimony of Lasser when the witness declared House sponsors of the relief slash acted as "agents of the Chamber of Commerce" and were trying to flood the private labor market.

The Georgian said Lasser was "impugning the motives of members of Congress." The committee told Lasser to condense his remarks,

Donors May Save Man Living on Borrowed Blood

By the Associated Press.

Newark, N. J., Jan. 1.—Doctors at St. Barnabas Hospital worked against time tonight in search of blood donors for a patient suffering a blood malady so rare that Staff Physician J. J. Rommer said it was the first case recorded in the United States and the fourth in medical history.

Dr. Rommer said Harry Battershall, 65, was suffering from aplastic anemia, acrestic type, and was doomed to die within a few hours unless given at least three pints of the proper blood.

His three sons and two of his friends, whose blood has kept him alive since he was stricken last May, pleaded with doctors to be allowed to give him more, but Dr. Rommer said they already had given so much they themselves were in danger of developing a common type of anemia.

The disease, he said, was caused by absence of marrow in the bones. A permanent cure is impossible, the doctor declared, and if the patient lives it will have to be on borrowed blood.

Hatchet Killer Gets Life Imprisonment

Milwaukee, Jan. 17 (AP).—Ernest John Mahr, 24, pleaded guilty today to the hatchet murder of 16-year-old Ruth Scott and was sentenced to life imprisonment.

He confessed killing the girl while attempting to rob her home yesterday.

The Gallup Poll

Huge Majority For Bi-Partisan Relief Rule

7 of Every 10 Voters in Both Parties Favor Sen. Bailey's Proposal

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, Jan. 17.—As Congress, armed with committee reports charging abuse of WPA funds, wrestles with legislation to take politics out of relief, one plan which meets with the overwhelming support of both Democratic and Republican voters throughout the country is that advanced by Senator Bailey, of North Carolina.

GALLUP

Senator Bailey's bill, shortly to be introduced in the Senate, provides that instead of allowing WPA funds to be handled by one administrator in Washington, a Federal committee composed of both Democrats and Republicans be set up in the National Capital to administer all relief money.

This proposal has just been put to voters in a national survey by the American Institute of Public Opinion as part of a comprehensive study on the whole relief question. The survey finds that

Frankfurter And Murphy Are Confirmed

Senate Approves Justice Unanimously, Attorney General by 78-7 Vote

Felix Frankfurter was confirmed as associate justice of the Supreme Court by the Senate yesterday without a dissenting vote; Frank Murphy was approved as Attorney General, 78-7, after bitter criticism of "his communistic activities and associations," and Harry Hopkins is expected to be confirmed as Secretary of Commerce tomorrow despite strenuous Republican opposition.

In the first roll call vote of the session, Murphy was supported by a solid bloc of Democrats and some Republicans. The seven "noes" came from a little group of Republicans that included two of the party's leading Presidential possibilities in 1940, Senators Vandenberg, of Michigan, and Taft, of Ohio. Murphy himself has been mentioned prominently as a Democratic candidate for the Presidential nomination.

Breach of Oath Charged

A lengthy, and at times acrimonious, debate on Murphy's appointment followed speedy Senatorial acceptance of Frankfurter to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Justice Cardozo. In a voice vote the liberal Harvard Law School professor was confirmed.

When Murphy's name was read out, however, Senator Bridges, New Hampshire Republican, jumped to his feet and began a scathing indictment of the former Governor of Michigan.

Although Bridges fortified his onslaught with references to Murphy's legal record and to his "repudiation" at the polls last November, his attack was based on the former Governor's alleged support of "sit-downers" during the General Motors strike of January and February, 1937.

"Murphy says he doesn't condone sit-down strikes. My God, what

Quoddy Dam, Ship Canal Fight Revived

Opposition Voiced As Roosevelt Again Demands Congress Approve Projects

Two of the most controversial projects of the early New Deal—the Florida Ship Canal and harnessing of the Passamaquoddy tidal power—were revived yesterday by the President in letters to House and Senate committees.

His surprise request for continuance of work on the two projects, which have been at a standstill since 1936, encountered a cross-fire of criticism from conservative Democrat and Republican leaders.

Open Mind Promised

But Chairman Bailey, of the Senate Commerce Committee, immediately advised the President his group will give the matter "open-minded consideration." Chairman Mansfield, of the House Rivers and Harbors Committee, said the House unit will do likewise.

The President wrote Bailey and Mansfield that the Florida Ship Canal will be built some day and "the building of it is justified today by commercial and military needs." For development of tidal power in Passamaquoddy Bay, Me., he asked an appropriation for completion of test borings and determination of the advisability of putting in "a small experimental plant" on the American side of the border. He reminded the committee chairman of a serious economic situation he said is prevailing in Maine.

Prompt Opposition

From Chairman Glass, of the Senate Appropriations Committee, and from a long list of economy-minded Senators, including Byrd, of Virginia, and Clark, of Missouri (Democrats), and Taft, of Ohio (Republican), came prompt opposition to the proposal.

House Minority Leader Martin declared the President "must know from past experience that Congress never will approve either project."

"Our national finances are in no condition to spend money on projects of this type, as the President well knows," Martin said. "This just gives Congress a chance to stop another raid on the Treasury. When we spend money, there certainly are places we can spend it to better advantage. I marvel at this proposal."

Brewster Drafts Bill

But a Republican, Representative Brewster, of Maine, long an advocate of "Quoddy" power development, said he was preparing a bill to carry out the President's request on the Maine tidal project. A House Democrat, Representative Green, of Florida, already has introduced a bill to continue work on the Florida ship canal.

In the Senate, Senator Pepper, of Florida, also an advocate of the canal pass through the Florida penninsula, said he thought Senator Bailey, as chairman of the Commerce Committee, should introduce the ship canal bill. Bailey failed

Subway Nickel Thefts Disputed By N. Y. Official

New York, Jan. 17 (AP).—A sharp dispute grew today out of District Attorney Dewey's charge that at least 26,000,000 nickels had been stolen by systematic turnstile tampering from the independent city-owned subway system, largest municipal utility in the world

As Dewey's office announced eight subway employes had admitted complicity in an alleged theft of $1,300,000 to $1,500,000 in three years, Chairman John H. Delaney, of the city board of transportation, said "there is only the smallest indirect evidence of the loss of even $1,000."

Mexico's New Nazi Envoy Revealed by Expelled Writer

By the Associated Press.

Mexico City, Jan. 17.—Dapp, the government press bureau, tonight issued a statement charging that Frank L. Kluckhohn, expelled correspondent of the New York Times, "maliciously misinterpreted" Mexico's policies.

The announcement said "his reports were always full of inaccuracies and, above all, of alarming predictions about the supposed course of national policies.

"The government was forced to take this measure on the basis that Mr. Kluckhohn, in his very active work, maliciously misinterpreted the doctrine of the Mexican government, inviting the hostility of foreign peoples against ours, thus contributing to hinder friendly relations with other governments, such as that of the United States of North America; but besides, Kluckhohn had entered the country in violation of an order of the immigration authorities that he not be admitted to national territory."

There was no explanation of the latter statement.

Wallace Process Tax Opposed by Roosevelt

Joins Morgenthau Against It; May Send Message to Congress Again Asking Laws to End Levy Exemptions on Federal and State Wages

President Roosevelt yesterday joined Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau in opposing processing taxes on farm commodities. At the same time, he revealed he would again appeal to Congress to put an end to tax exemption for governmental securities and salaries.

He will send a special message to Congress tomorrow, he indicated, renewing his request of last April that legislation be enacted to tax securities issued and salaries paid by the Federal, State and municipal governments.

May Hit 119,000 Here

The possibility arose that 119,000 Federal workers within the District might have to pay income taxes here should Congress act favorably on the President's recommendations. Already before Congressional committees is a plan for a District tax on incomes of $14,000 and up, but officials here believed efforts would be made to lower the limit should such a bill be passed.

The President's message also will ask Congress to deal with an emergency whereby salaries paid by the Port of New York Authority and similar quasi-Governmental corporations, as well as interest on securities of these concerns, will be subject to three years' retroactive taxes February 15 unless relief is granted.

Believe Plan Would Be Upheld

The President, it is understood, may recommend that legislation be enacted disposing in one piece of this matter and the whole question of tax exemption.

Employes and security holders of corporations like the Port of New York Authority are subject to back taxes as a result of a United States Supreme Court decision last year holding that a Port of New York Authority engineer would have to pay Federal income taxes.

The decision of the court in this case convinced many Administration officials, among them Roswell Magill, former Undersecretary of the Treasury, that legislation to end tax exemption would be upheld.

The President disagrees with the view that a constitutional amendment is necessary to tax reciprocally the securities and salaries of the Federal Government and State and other local governments.

Termed "Depressant"

Asked about processing taxes at his press conference, Mr. Roosevelt said they would fall in the class of a consumers' tax, and, as a result, unquestionably would be what he has called a "depressant."

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace is advocating enactment of processing taxes to finance future parity payment programs under the 1938 agricultural adjustment act. Although invalidated by the Supreme Court in 1935, the belief is widely entertained that the court would

Roosevelt Maps D. C. Projects With Randolph

President Indicates He'll Take Active Role; To See 'Mayor' Again

President Roosevelt yesterday indicated he will assume an active role in solving District problems this year as he conferred at length with Representative Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, new chairman of the House District Committee.

Randolph said the "preliminary discussion" covered the local tax report, District government reorganization, public health and suffrage.

The new Washington "mayor" said the President is keenly interested in all local civic problems and anxious to see them settled in the best interest of District residents.

Another conference that probably will go more deeply into local issues will be held at the convenience of the President.

Manager Form Discussed

Coincident with Randolph's call at the White House, E. O. Griffenhagen, Chicago expert, started work at the Capitol on final recommendations relative to a District government reorganization. He said the report probably will be in the hands of the House District Committee around the first of February.

Randolph said that the suggestion of a city manager form of government for Washington was discussed with the President, but he declined to reveal the President's attitude.

Due to the long delay in naming a Commissioner to succeed George E. Allen, some District officials were inclined to believe the Presi-

$50,000 Sought To Study Proposed Subway for District

Riley E. Elgen, chairman of the Public Utilities Commission, said yesterday he would ask Congress for $50,000 to study the desirability of a subway here.

"We are rapidly approaching the time when our mass transportation system must be augmented by a subway system," he said.

At the same time, Elgen said he would recommend a traffic regulation which would prohibit street car space to motorists. He explained that automobiles which "clutter up" the street railways are "seriously impeding the progress of moving street cars."

Storm Warnings Hoisted on Atlantic

The Weather Bureau last night ordered storm warnings from Cape Hatteras to Sandy Hook and reported that a disturbance which is expected to attain gale force today was moving over a wide area of western Tennessee.

Snow began falling in Washington shortly after midnight, but the Weather Bureau's forecast was rain today, fair and colder tomorrow.

Bullets Halt Hit-Run Car Doing 80 m.p.h.

Officer Drives With One Hand, Fires With Other; Auto Fells D. C. Girl

The chase ended at Muirkirk, between Beltsville and Laurel, when Policeman Scarboro's bullets punctured the tires of the fugitive's car.

Car Hits Young Girl

It began on the outskirts of Baltimore, in front of the Montgomery Ward plant, and before it was over two persons were injured and a civilian motorist, pursuing the runaway, had almost lost his life.

The driver, Carol Fleming, 17, colored, of 930 Westminster street northwest, was taken back to Baltimore. Police said he and six companions were driving into Baltimore when the first accident occurred, a collision with another machine.

Witness Gives Pursuit

The driver of the other machine, police said, gave chase, and the fleeing youth struck a young girl in front of the Montgomery Ward plant.

At this point, according to police, his six companions deserted Fleming and, turning his car, he started back toward Washington.

Meantime, William F. Holland, a Baltimorean, who had seen the girl struck while he was in a barber-

False WPA Claims Held to Have Cost Millions in N. Y.

New York, Jan. 17 (AP).—Misrepresentations by numerous firms in the filing of WPA claims to the Government, including false statements with regard to the amount of insurance premiums paid, were believed today to have cost the New York State insurance fund and private insurance companies millions of dollars.

Federal and State officials said pay roll audit manipulations in the WPA claims had cost the Government at least $1,000,000.

The disclosure of the alleged Government losses was made when Fred Cincotti, president, and the Cincotti Trucking & Contracting Co. were indicted by a Federal grand jury for filing false claims.

London (Wednesday), Jan. 18 (AP).—The British steamer Ulmus, in an S. O. S. picked up early today, said she was in flames near Gibraltar.

Armed Guam Has Support In Congress

Appropriations Chief Wants Base Near Japan; Inclusion in Vinson Bill Indicated

By William V. Nessly.

While President Roosevelt yesterday cast doubt on whether the Administration would ask funds for fortifying the Island of Guam, far out in the Pacific near Japan, the project, bitterly denounced by Tokyo military officials and some Americans, last night appeared still to have support.

The President, at his press conference, was reminded of criticism of the proposal, and replied by asking what it was all about. He asked if any appropriation had been sought for the purpose, and suggested it would be well for all the papers, both here and in Japan, to inquire on that point. He recommended that the critics stick to brass tacks and facts, adding that the official attitude would be disclosed only when Navy officers appear before Congressional committees to make their recommendations.

Favored in Congress

However, Representative Sprugham (Democrat), of Nevada, chairman of the Naval Appropriations sub-committee, which ultimately must propose funds for the program, said last night he favors fortifications of Guam.

The undertaking was among those recommended by the special naval board headed by Rear Admiral Arthur J. Hepburn following an extensive study of the need for some two dozen additional naval bases. President Roosevelt's national defense message asked $44,000,000 for naval bases "in general agreement" with the board's report.

In addition, Chairman Vinson, of the House Naval Affairs Committee, has said his bill providing for new naval bases will include the "priorities" in the Hepburn report, one of which was the Guam fortification. Vinson is awaiting a report from the Budget Bureau on his bill before disclosing its details.

Canal Held Vital

At the same time, Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, joined in the criticism of the fortification plan and introduced into the record a letter from Maj. Gen. William C. Rivers, former inspector general of the Army, declaring the proposal was "the most markedly aggressive and provocative military step of the kind" he had seen in a half century.

These developments came while War Department officials were warning Congressional committees considering the President's $552,000,000 defense program that the Panama Canal must be made destruction-proof.

Secretary of War Woodring and Gen. Malin Craig, Army chief of staff, told House and Senate Military Affairs committees of plans prepared for construction of "by-pass" canals around strategic locks in the Panama waterway, to be used in case the locks are crippled or destroyed. It was said Gov.

Coaster Plunges Into Creek, Skull Fracture Feared

Shirley "Pixie" Gordon, 10-year-old daughter of Kenneth Gordon, Government employe, was feared to have suffered a fractured skull last night when her sled plunged 10 feet down an embankment in Rock Creek Park near Seventeenth and Newton streets northwest.

According to her mother, the girl's sled crashed through a road barrier. Shirley's head struck a rock as she plunged into the shallow creek. Friends carried her to a residence in the neighborhood and she was taken to Children's Hospital.

The Gordons live at 1708 Newton street northwest.

By Edward T. Folliard

Fort George G. Meade, Md., Jan. 17.—With all the eclat of a Schiaparelli, the Army unveiled its new uniform for enlisted men here today. It is slate blue—a sort of blend of the two colors that clashed in 1861-65, the Union blue and the Confederate gray.

Poets will like it. After being stifled for 21 years by such unmelodious words as olive drab and khaki, they now have something over which they can grow lyrical. The line "Boys in blue" is back.

However, the color is not the only new feature of the 1939 uniform. There is a new hat; in fact, two of them. There is also a new style of sport shirt, a new style of leggings and a natty coat with a "bellows" back.

One of the hats, a substitute for the wide-brimmed campaign hat, causes the onlooker to gawk, at first. It is a blue overseas cap that has sprouted a visor. The visor is to keep the sun and rain out of the warrior's eyes when he is in the field. The effect, however, is to make him look like a coal miner off duty, minus his lamp.

The dress, or forage, cap is definitely a winner, except that something may have to be done about its visor, too. The wire has been removed from the top of the cap, permitting the soldier to wear it at

Italy Threatens War in Spring If Paris Aids Spain

Franco's Drive on Barcelona Slows Down; Loyalists Counter-Attack

By the Associated Press.

Hendaye, France, Jan. 17.—Spanish government forces in mountain strongholds stiffened their resistance to the steady insurgent advance toward Barcelona today amid general expectations that the two reinforced armies were preparing for a battle which might decide the outcome of the civil war.

The insurgent offensive against the government capital slowed down slightly. Only in the center of the three-pronged drive into Catalonia did the insurgents report any real advance, this by capturing another position on the highway to Barcelona through Igualada. The position was roughly 30 or 35 miles from the capital.

Loyalists Reinforced

Just south of this region, unconfirmed reports said, government troops unloosed counter-attacks and retook Santa Coloma de Queralt, the first town the insurgents occupied after entering Barcelona Province.

Government forces were believed increased to approximately 400,000 men by regulations of January 5 under which boys not yet 18 were called to defense lines. Military observers estimated insurgent Gen. Franco could put 500,000 men into a conflict for the possession of highways fanning out westward 35 miles from Barcelona.

They said the government command must fight soon or surrender and end its strategy of withdrawing from one fortified position to another without risking a decisive battle. Such a plan has been used since the insurgent Catalonian campaign started December 23.

Pallerols Taken

Insurgent reports indicated much of the decrease in punch today was due to cleaning up pockets formed by insurgent efforts to keep in contact with the rapidly retiring militiamen.

Along the Mediterranean, where the advance has been most rapid, the insurgents apparently made little effort to continue their progress after the week-end capture of Tarragona.

The insurgent command announced the capture of Pallerols, 41 airline miles west of Barcelona and 13 miles west of Igualada, the northern key to Barcelona defenses. But this occupation represented an advance of less than 3 miles.

The insurgent advance guard was in contact with the government outpost line which follows the course of the Gaya River from the Mediterranean east of Tarragona and north to the vicinity of Bellprat.

Loyalist Lines Strong

But as fast as the insurgents made contact they seemed to halt to consolidate positions forming bridgeheads to cover their crossing of the river.

The government's main defense lines are some miles farther east.

Government Spain described the lines as the strongest yet built during the 2½-year-old conflict.

These reports said the fortifications had been under construction for more than a year.

[In southern Spain, loyalists reported fresh gains in two offensives directed by Gen. Jose Miaja, both of which are "diversion" drives designed to draw off insurgent pressure from Catalonia, but thus far unsuccessful in that respect, the United Press said.—Editor's note.]

Nazi Organ Backs Rome Press Warning; French Seek to Avoid Conflict

By the United Press.

Rome, Jan. 17.—Premier Mussolini's controlled press, supported by a formal German announcement, today warned France of "war in the spring" in an outburst apparently designed to prevent French shipments of arms and munitions to Spanish loyalists.

"It is possible that events will come to a head swiftly in the next few days, but it is more probable that the crisis will explode with the arrival of the first swallows," wrote the columnist Camicia Nera in the Resto del Carlino, Fascist Party organ.

Germans Back Warning

Support for the Italian warnings came from the Diplomatisch Politische Korrespondenz, organ of the German foreign office, which announced:

"There should be no doubt anywhere that Germany indorses the point of view expressed by authoritative Italian quarters that should there be any increase in Red interference in the Spanish civil war, Italy reserves the right of freedom of action."

Italian papers, apparently given free rein for the first time since the beginning last November of Italian clamor for French territory, based their bitter outbursts on recent articles in the Paris press impugning the courage of Italian soldiers and sailors.

Referred to Caporetto

The Paris Midi recently spoke scornfully of the bravery of Italy's naval forces, and made stinging references to Italy's disastrous retreat at Caporetto in the World War, and to the defeat of Italian Blackshirt divisions at Guadalajara in Spain.

Fascist leaders, however, indicated the attacks could be traced, not so much to the ridicule of Italian military prowess, as to the Spanish insurgent drive on Barcelona, whose success might be jeopardized should France aid the loyalists.

"Perhaps some day Italian squadrons will leave their bases in a direction which would not please the Paris Midi and at the same time there would be other operations on land and in the air not the least bit comforting to nervous Parisians," declared the Corriere de la Sera of Milan.

An earlier official statement in Berlin had said that "German political observers unanimously support Italy's emphatic declaration regarding attempts of certain French circles to induce the (French) government to support Red (loyalist) Spain . . . Such intervention would

Roosevelt's Stand Against Fascism Lauded in Moscow

Moscow, Jan. 17 (AP).—Le Journal de Moscou, French language publication which frequently speaks the mind of the Soviet Russian foreign office, today said President Roosevelt was "the only statesman in the bourgeois world" aware of fascism's threat and courageous enough to express himself.

Le Journal predicted Fascist agitation soon for concessions in the Mediterranean, but added:

"They will undoubtedly encounter great difficulties and the active resistance of adherents of real and stable universal peace."

WHERE SENATORS RELAX.

Only 26 of the 96 U. S. Senators live in houses, glass or otherwise. They are the ones who want privacy, spaciousness, basements, attics. The others have partly shaken off household cares during the session by living in apartments or hotels.

Mrs. Clark ... room for books

Curiosity spurred me to a tour of inspection to see how our $10,000 Senators pitch camp.

* * * *

I discovered that Pat McCarran, of Nevada, is a neighbor of mine. He lives a few houses away on the same street, in a brand new eight-room brick house painted white, with blue shutters and a slate roof, 4.9 miles from his desk. It's air conditioned (but not cooled), with a basement playroom, a large screened porch, sturdy shrubs, a large screened porch with a railed terrace on its roof. I've never seen the Senator up there.

* * * *

It's about an $18,000 house and would rent for around $150. But it's within about 20 feet of the houses on each side, too close, say I. Ours is a quiet road, except for the cars that race past at 50 m. p. h. into Rock Creek Park.

One of these cars killed the tots' puppy the other day, and I'm about to ask the Senator to make 'em slow up.

"—senators in hiding"

Another neighbor of ours is Ted (What-a-man) Bilbo, the junior Senator from Mississippi, back along the woods a ways.

His square, red-brick house looks rather grim, like the intrepid farthest north outpost of the Deep South. The concrete steps are painted red, and there are plaster flower boxes on the porch.

Though next to a vacant lot, it's squeezed into a 40-foot space. Lots of room for a couple whose children are grown up (one a lieutenant in Honolulu). I'd guess the rent at $100.

* * * *

Another neighbor, a little farther away, is Hattie Caraway, the calm, imperturbable Senator from Arkansas. She lives in exactly the place for a lady senator, the north half of a sedate, almost stately brick duplex, with a red tile roof, on a quiet diagonal avenue.

Right now the other half of the duplex is vacant, in case you want to get next to Widow Caraway.

It has a large fireplace and a roofless front terrace with an iron rail. Vines cling to the brick. In front is a bus stop. She's about 5 miles from the Capitol, and her rent would be around $125.

* * * *

I wish I could claim Lynn Frazier, of North Dakota, as a neighbor. But he's too well concealed up in Takoma Park. It took my new compass, three maps and some sleuthing among the natives to find his modest corner bungalow. He'd be hard for a constituent to find. His six rooms, bird bath, four evergreens and four fruit trees (with the biggest yard yet) must cost him around $75 a month; in Fargo it would cost $45, and I'll bet he saves as much out of his salary as any Senator. He has a fire hydrant and a mailbox handy; and a big sleeping porch.

"—some live in hotels"

Almost as hard to find is Bennett Clark's elegant brick mansion out behind American University, not far from the Potomac. It's a de luxe neighborhood of new $20,000 and $25,000 (and up) houses, a charming street where motorists can't drive 50 m. p. h. or run over dogs. It would cost you at least $200 a month to rent a house around here.

* * * *

The Senator from Missouri saw a bookroom with plenty of shelves and said "I'll take it." Didn't even look at the rest of the house. Probably 10 or 11 rooms, with comfortable porches and a room that comes up to the peak of the roof. Just right for a presidential possibility; not too fancy.

* * * *

Well, most of 'em live in hotels. They get squared away at their home work of an evening, ready to write a new law, maybe, or at least a couple of amendments. The door bell rings, or maybe it's the phone saying "One of your constituents is here to see you."

So they hide away the detective story and try to remember if there are any ice cubes.

By midnight there may be a caucus of constituents. When the guests leave at 1:45 they vow, "Next session we'll take a house out near the Fraziers in the suburbs!"

But they never do. They like to see their constituents.

Subpenas Sent To 'Hopson Companies'

FPC Orders Books, Officials to Service Charge Inquiry Today

By the United Press.

The Federal Power Commission last night issued subpenas for the books and records of 14 companies and the personal appearances of 29 officers of utility companies alleged to be under control of Howard C. Hopson, head of the Associated Gas and Electric system.

The commission has been inquiring into Hopson's influence in the companies and ordered that books and records be produced at 10 a. m. today when the investigation is resumed. The FPC and the Pennsylvania Public Utilities Commission are co-operating.

"The production of these books and records, and the appearance of the individuals cited in the subpenas," FPC Chairman Clyde Seavey said, "will enable the Federal and Pennsylvania commissions to obtain, at first-hand, information relating to the services these companies have performed, the reasonableness of their charges, and the extent to which they may control or are controlled by other companies or individuals in the Associated system. The subpenas have been issued in order to insure the availability of the records of these so-called 'Hopson companies' . . ."

The FPC charged that the subsidiary companies failed to produce their records. "Great uncertainty" exists as to the whereabouts of the material, the FPC said.

The companies subpenaed were: Corporate Records and secretarial assistants; Daniel Starch and staff; Day & Co.; Engineering and Consulting Associates; Finance and Securities Assistants; H. C. Hopson; H. C. Hopson & Co.; Public Utility Investing Corporation; Securities Registration Agency; Transfer and Paying Agency; Utility Management Corporation; Utility Auditors and Tax Consultants; Utility and Financial Accountants, Inc.; Lillian M. Nickl; Utility and Financial Advertising Agency; Edward J. Cheney.

Chilean Praises Secretary Hull's Lima Address

Secretary of State Hull made the most significant speech and was the outstanding figure at the recent Lima Conference, Benjamin Cohen, former Chilean diplomat to Washington and now an official of the Chilean Foreign Office, said last night in a short wave broadcast from Santiago, Chile, heard over the Blue Network of the National Broadcasting Company.

Cohen spoke on a symposium led by the Rev. Maurice Sheehy, professor of religious education at Catholic University, who is making an 18,000-mile good-will tour through South America.

Other speakers on the program were Bishop James H. Ryan, of Omaha, who is making the good-will trip with Father Sheehy, and Don Carlos Alberez, a member of the academic center of the Catholic University of Chile.

Assured Workers' Incomes Advocated To Retail Group

New York, Jan. 17 (AP).—Assured incomes for workers, and Government regulation of farm production were advocated tonight before the annual convention of the National Retail Dry Goods Association.

Harry L. Brown, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, told the retailers that crop control was as necessary as industry's control of production and that "it is to the interest of businessmen to see that the present program works."

Merle C. Hale, director of executive personnel of the General Motors Corporation, described his company's employe income benefit plans, asserting: "The effect of such plans will be cumulative because greater stability of income."

Klamath Reservation Indians seek cash payment of $5,313,000 judgment against the Government for land deeded to Oregon by mistake, but Government desires to keep the money in trust

On Capitol Hill

The Senate Committee on Interoceanic Canals received yesterday a proposal to grant annuities to civilians who worked in construction of the Panama Canal.

SEN. PEPPER

Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, introduced a bill providing annuities that would include 40 per cent of average annual basic salary if service was for three to four years, 50 per cent for service from four to six years and 60 per cent if for more than six years.

Members of the Senate will dine on Montana elk in their dining room tomorrow. A 400-pound elk, sent to Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, by the Gardiner (Mont.) Commercial Club, will supply the main course. The Senator has invited all his colleagues and the State's two Representatives, O'Connor and Thorkelson, to the luncheon.

Knoxville, Tenn., Jan. 17 (AP).—Former Senator James P. Pope, of Idaho, arrived here today to take over his new job as a director of the Tennessee Valley Authority. Pope intimated he would tour the Tennessee Valley soon to inspect all TVA projects. His family will join him here later.

A Northern woman believes she has found a way to educate the underprivileged classes of the South. She described her plan in a letter to Representative Leavy, of Washington, as:

"Spend the country's defense appropriations on our underprivileged Southerners . . . we've got enough armaments now."

Frank McHale, Indiana Democratic national committeeman and director of Paul V. McNutt's campaign for the Democratic Presidential nomination, conferred with Indiana's Senators, Frederick Van Nuys and Sherman Minton, both Democrats, on State patronage. Pending McNutt's return from the Philippine Islands, where he is high commissioner, McHale said "we do not plan to expand our campaign or open up any offices outside of Indiana."

Representative J. Parnell Thomas (Republican), of New Jersey member of the Dies Committee which investigated un-American activities, said he would introduce a resolution today for impeachment of Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, only woman ever to serve in the Cabinet. He said the measure would charge her with "failing" and "neglecting" enforcement of statutes covering deportation of alien radicals.

Murphy's 1st Message Is On White Slave Act

As his first recommendation to Congress Attorney General Murphy yesterday urged an amendment to the white slave traffic act which would permit a double penalty in all cases where the victim is under 18 years of age. The recommendation was sent to Speaker Bankhead of the House, and to Senator Ashurst, chariman of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Under existing law the double penalty, 10 years or $10,000 or both, cannot be inflicted unless a common carrier is used for transportation.

Ickes Fears Tribesmen Would Dissipate Funds if Distributed Immediately; Delegates Plan Appeal to Congress

Two full-blooded Indians yesterday demanded of Secretary of the Interior Ickes $5,313,347.32 owed their tribes by the Government.

They wanted "wampum" and no excuses, they informed the Secretary. Ickes, however, insisted most of the money be retained in the Treasury as a trust fund.

Now the Indians are going to ask Congress to pass a bill authorizing final distribution of the $5,000,000 to the 1,450 residents of the Klamath Indian Reservation, in Southern Oregon.

Back in the days immediately after the Civil War, the United States mistakenly donated land owned by the Indians to the State of Oregon. The United States Supreme Court last spring ruled that Uncle Sam must pay.

Under an Interior Department plan the bulk of the $5,000,000 was put in the Treasury and the remainder placed to the credit of the Indians. They want money and no trusts.

In Washington with instructions from their tribes to get the entire amount and nothing else, Dice Crane, of the Klamaths, and Boyd J. Jackson, of the Modocs, called on Secretary Ickes. Commissioner of Indian Affairs John Collier and his assistant, William Zimmerman, jr., were present.

"After extended debates by the general counsel of the Klamath Tribe, the plan approved by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs has been overwhelmingly rejected and our people have voted in favor of prorating the judgment, 'share and share alike,' to each enrolled member of the Klamath, Modoc and Yahoskin bands of Snake Indians of the Klamath Reservation of Oregon," Crane and Jackson informed Ickes.

"The money would not last long if pro-rated to each person," Ickes answered. "In most cases, it would be immediately spent, used for automobiles or for other things which would not benefit the tribe members."

Ickes urged the Indians to "reconsider" their action and said the Commissioner of Indian Affairs would seek a solution to the present system of distributing the money. At present, plans have been made for a $2,000 per capita payment to the 1,450 Indians, the remainder being held in the Treasury with tribe members drawing interest.

Jackson explained that if the entire $5,000,000 is given his people it would still be under jurisdiction of the superintendent of the Klamath Agency, a Department of Interior official.

"We want to use the money for improving health, education, housing and even taking care of our aged on the reservation," he added.

more than seven in every ten voters favor Senator Bailey's idea for bipartisan administration of relief. One especially interesting sidelightis that Democratic voters are just as strongly in favor of the plan as Republicans.

The survey question asked: "Would you favor having a national committee made up of members of both major political parties to handle unemployment relief?"

YES	73%
NO	27

The vote by parties showed the following results:

	Yes	No
Democrats	72%	28%
Republicans	74	26

This survey is one of several Institute studies indicating that a majority of voters are not satisfied with the system of relief administration in its present form. One recent study found that a majority of voters think that politics plays a part in the present handling of relief in their communities, and another showed a majority in favor of putting all relief officials under civil service.

In explaining their approval of Senator Bailey's plan voters reached by the Institute in all walks of life gave two chief reasons. The largest number said it would go far toward eliminating graft and political preference because the two parties would have a chance to watch each other.

One voter, a housewife in Michigan, expressed the typical comment: "Relief should never be a partisan matter. When you're dealing with human suffering one party should have as much authority as another."

A second reason advanced by voters was that by setting up a bipartisan commission the Administration could "stop party criticism of relief."

The minority of voters opposed to the Bailey plan argue, on the other hand, that it would not really take politics out of relief and that there would be bickering and dissension among the members of the relief commission.

The issue of misuse of WPA funds was pointed up in Congress on the very first day of the session when the Sheppard committee filed its report on the WPA, listing a number of recommendations for new legislation.

A few days after the report was published, the Institute started a Nation-wide survey to test the public's attitude toward some of the more important recommendations. The results of this study will be published later this week.

Aiken Tempest Is Teapot Kind, President Says

Denies War Department Attempted to Seize Flood Control Land

By the United Press.

President Roosevelt yesterday characterized as a tempest in a teapot the Federal Government's dispute with Vermont control projects, and expressed hope that the differences could be adjusted.

The Chief Executive told newsmen that they should ascertain for themselves whether the War Department attempted to take Vermont land for flood control without consent of the State, as alleged by Gov. George B. Aiken. The issue led Aiken to ask the Vermont Legislature for a $67,000 war chest to fight the alleged encroachment.

Investigation Urged

Mr. Roosevelt said that he is confident an investigation of the War Department's attitude will reveal some rather pertinent facts, because the United States Government never has attempted to take land without a State's permission.

He emphasized that the 1938 New England flood control bill was designed 100 per cent for that purpose even though it was amended to permit development of power on the projects.

Hurricane Request Pared

While he was expounding on the flood control situation, a House Appropriations sub-committee informally raised the "States' right" issue when it pared Mr. Roosevelt's request for $5,000,000 for New England to repair damage by last fall's hurricane.

The committee cut the figure to $3,000,000 and wrote in a provision that the States must match it dollar for dollar.

The sub-committee's action, which needs approval of the full appropriations committee, came after the group trimmed a total of 23 per cent from Mr. Roosevelt's request for a $13,529,000 deficiency bill carrying the hurricane-relief, wage-hour administration, and other funds. The bill is to be brought to the floor Thursday.

Found Guilty in Accidental Holdup Slaying

Bandit Was Killed When Pistol Went Off as Robbery Victim Beaten

Three young holdup men last night faced prison terms of 20 years to life for the "accidental murder" of their accomplice, George E. Sanford, 20.

Sanford was killed August 13 by a pistol which went off while Leroy Evans, 19, was beating Thomas Giles, colored, on the head with it. The three were struggling in the back seat of a moving automobile, in which the men had picked up Giles to rob him.

Jury Deliberates 5 Hours

Convicted with Evans of second degree murder, before Justice Adkins, were George Malloy, 19, and James D. Posey, 20. The jurors deliberated five hours.

The court told the jury that the case was one in which the accidental death was to be treated as though it were premeditated, because it had occurred in the course of a felony.

Officers testified that Posey signed a written confession, and that the others orally admitted the robbery plot. Posey and Evans said they were the men who threw the dying Sanford on a table at Children's Hospital and fled without giving their names.

Confession Repudiated

The defendants, in the trial, admitted most of the facts of the killing, as charged by the Government, but denied they joined in the agreement to commit robbery. Posey repudiated his confession, claiming he was too drunk when questioned to have made the statements attributed to him.

The three men have 10 days in which to appeal.

Court May Test Prince Georges Tax on Greenbelt

Possibility of a court test to decide Prince Georges County's powers to tax Greenbelt, Md., arose yesterday when the board of commissioners ordered a levy on privately owned automobiles at the Federal community.

The board's action was taken over the admonition of its counsel, Ogle Marbury, who ruled several weeks ago that the county had no legal power to impose taxes at Greenbelt on the ground it was a "Federal reservation."

William Carson, president of the board, invited a court test of the tax order.

Greenbelt residents have never been required to pay auto or personal property taxes.

The Farm Security Administration, which has title to the real property in the town, pays the county a sum in lieu of real estate taxes under provisions of the Bankhead act.

She suffered multiple fractures of the left leg and both arms and possibly internal injuries.

Four young "pioneers" who started over the mountains for California yesterday in someone else's car with less than $1 between them and got as far as Frederick, Md., were returned to Washington last night. Three, under 18 years of age, are in the custody of their parents. The fourth is being held at the First Precinct Station, charged with the unauthorized use of an automobile.

The car is the property of James L. O'Conor, of the 100 block of W street northwest.

James B. Ford, 21, of 616 Twenty-second street northwest, is also being detained on the same charge. He told police he drove away in the auto of Dr. Austin Chinn, of 2737 Devonshire place northwest.

HELP STOMACH DIGEST FOOD

Without Laxatives—and You'll Eat Everything from Soup to Nuts

The stomach should digest two pounds of food daily. When you eat heavy, greasy, starchy or rich foods or when you are nervous, hurried or worry—your stomach often pours out too much acid. Your food doesn't digest and you have gas, heartburn, nausea, pain or sour stomach. You feel sour, sick and upset all over.

Doctors say never take a laxative for stomach pain. It is dangerous and foolish. It takes those little black tablets called Bell-ans for indigestion to make the excess stomach acids harmless, relieve distress in a few minutes and put you back on your feet. Relief is so quick it is amazing and one 25c package proves it. Ask for Bell-ans for Indigestion.

'Miss Civil Service' Has Busy Day, From a Broadcast to a Buss

This job of being "Miss Civil Service" left blonde Ellen Maki almost hanging limp on the cup The Post gave her.

It started in the bleak hours of yesterday morning when she was called to a radio station to comment on the state of being "Miss Civil Service," and hit high peak in the middle afternoon when several hundred of her co-workers saw William T. Rollins, assistant superintendent, division of Postal Savings, plant a kiss on her lips and call her a credit to the Postoffice Department.

There was something like that all day. First off, they brought flowers to her desk. And when the big meeting came, she was lined up beside Ramsey S. Black, Third Assistant Postmaster General; Roy M. North, deputy third assistant and Rollins and the speaking began.

Miss Maki, they said, had been well chosen for The Post honor, because she had been watched and her efficiency was well known in the department.

"I thank you from the bottom of my heart," said Miss Maki.

And then the kiss was planted—an assignment the department gave Rollins—and Miss Maki said again that she hardly could believe her fortune.

D. C. Girl, 18, Tries Suicide By Gas in N. Y.

Going Under, Writes Friend, 'Stick It Out;' Tells Her Sensations

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Jan. 17.—An 18-year-old Washington girl was recovering tonight from gas poisoning, police said, after she had written a note describing her reactions while the fumes took effect. Neighbors and an inhalator crew saved her from what police termed a suicide attempt.

The pretty blonde, Betty McCormick, daughter of Mrs. J. G. McCormick, 3700 Massachusetts avenue northwest, was found unconscious in her lower West Side apartment after neighbors had complained to the building superintendent that they smelled gas.

A policeman called physicians and an inhalator crew, who revived the girl and sent her to Bellevue Hospital.

Betty, according to friends in Washington, is a graduate of Woodrow Wilson High School, where she took a leading part in dramatics. She was a member of both the Civic and Roadside theaters there.

According to police, Miss McCormick turned on the gas and then began to write a long note to "Bill," in which she described effects of the gas, berated herself and urged Bill to "stick it out" because "I think you can be really great." Starting in a well-written hand, the penmanship gradually became illegible as unconsciousness overcame her.

Part of the letter, quoted by police officials, read as follows:

"Darling, this is really stupid of me, but I'm in a stupid frame of mind. You know how long I've been talking about gas and things. The gas is making me sleepy.

". . . You have no idea how wonderful I feel—no worries about anything.

Lived With Another Woman

"I went to church and told God what I was doing. I asked Him to forgive me which He will. I lit four candles—one for me and one for you, Bill. I prayed for you. I'll admit it's a low thing to do and cowardly. Well, baby, I'm off to the gas house. So take care of yourself and don't give up. I think you can be really great if you just stick it out."

Mrs. Florence Lee, wife of the building superintendent, told police Miss McCormick had shared an apartment with another woman since April.

Only One Bidder On Flying Mail In an Autogiro

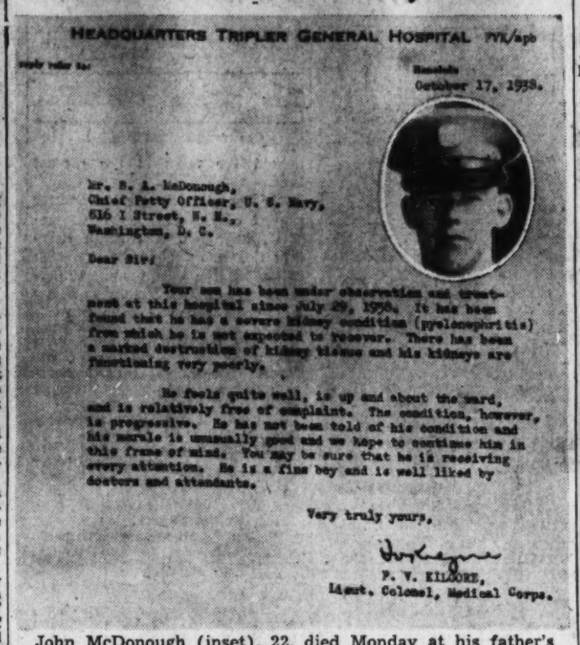
Senator Walsh Probes Death Of Soldier Mt. Alto Rejected



HEADQUARTERS TRIPLER GENERAL HOSPITAL FYL/apb

Honolulu
October 17, 1938.

Mr. B. A. McDonough,
Chief Petty Officer, U. S. Navy,
616 I Street, N. E.,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir:

Your son has been under observation and treatment at this hospital since July 29, 1938. It has been found that he has a severe kidney condition (pyelonephritis) from which he is not expected to recover. There has been a marked destruction of kidney tissue and his kidneys are functioning very poorly.

He feels quite well, is up and about the ward, and is relatively free of complaint. The condition, however, is progressive. He has not been told of his condition and his morale is unusually good and we hope to continue him in this frame of mind. You may be sure that he is receiving every attention. He is a fine boy and is well liked by doctors and attendants.

Very truly yours,

F. V. KILGORE,
Lieut. Colonel, Medical Corps.

John McDonough (inset), 22, died Monday at his father's home here. He was not accepted for treatment at Government hospitals here, although the letter above, from Tripler General Hospital at Honolulu to the boy's father, B. A. McDonough, a chief petty officer in the Navy, leaves no doubt as to the need for hospitalization

Clears Veterans Bureau of Blame in McDonough Case; Asks Why Youth Was Sent Here Alone in Poor Health

Senator Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, chairman of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee, intends to ask the Army for a complete account of the last illness of John R. McDonough, 22, former soldier, who died Monday at his father's home at 816 I street northeast after he had been refused admission to Mount Alto Veterans' Hospital.

The young soldier, who died of a progressive kidney disease, acute nephritis, was honorably discharged from the service last October and was brought to the United States from Hawaii.

On January 6 officials at Mount Alto refused to admit him for treatment because his discharge papers did not state his disability had been incurred in line of duty.

He entered the Army in April, 1937, after the customary physical examination. During his service in Honolulu he underwent an operation for hernia and shortly afterward was issued an insurance policy.

Last Friday the boy accompanied his stepmother to the Navy dispensary. A nurse there said he should be placed in a hospital immediately.

The following day Bernard McDonough, his father, a chief machinist's mate at the navy yard, said, Mount Alto again refused to admit his son. The hospital authorities, however, urged Mrs. McDonough to apply to the Veterans Administration for authorization for her son to be admitted.

Without asking the Veterans Administration for the authorization, Mrs. McDonough on Monday appealed to Senator Walsh.

After a careful investigation, Senator Walsh said the Veterans Administration appeared to be cleared in the matter, but added he could not understand why the boy was sent to Washington alone when in such poor hearth. The elder McDonough found his son dead in bed a few hours after the appeal to Senator Walsh.

Frankfurter And Murphy Are Confirmed

did he do?" Bridges shouted, as he charged the red-headed former Governor "broke his oath of office."

To Murphy's defense came the Democratic Senator from Michigan, Prentiss Brown, while the latter's Republican colleague, Vandenberg, made a brief speech against the nominee. Others who supported Murphy were Senators Burke, Nebraska Democrat, who is a frequent foe of the Administration; Minton, of Indiana, assistant majority whip; Clark, of Missouri, a Presidential hopeful, and Logan, of Kentucky, chairman of the judiciary subcommittee before which Murphy requested a hearing in order to explain his part in the sit-downs. Senator Bailey, North Carolina Democrat and anti-New Dealer, denounced Murphy's attitude during the "sit-downs" but voted to confirm him.

Although only seven Republicans—Vandenberg, Bridges, Taft, Gurney, of South Dakota; Holman, of Oregon; White, of Maine, and Tobey, of New Hampshire—voted against Murphy (Hale of Maine, was paired against him) it was expected that most if not all of the minority will oppose confirmation of Hopkins.

The Commerce committee will pass upon the Hopkins appointment today, and the full Senate will probably vote on it tomorrow. Approval is considered certain, but not without vehement Republican attacks, possibly supported by a few conservative Democratic votes. The former WPA administrator was questioned three days last week by a commerce sub-committee on the role politics played in the relief he was administering.

Debate "Rehashed"

In a debate that was largely a rehash of the judiciary sub-committee hearing of last week, Murphy was denounced by Bridges for showing "disregard of the law and order he's supposed to uphold."

The New Hampshire Senator alleged "at no time during the sit-downs did Murphy publicly demand that the sit-downers abandon their activity."

Quoting an interview with Murphy that appeared in Saturday's Washington Post, Bridges scoffed at the Attorney General's assertion that he had kept secret a letter he had read to John L. Lewis during the General Motors sit-down because he feared the effect such a revelation might have on his position as mediator between capital and labor.

"How could a statement ordering John L. Lewis to obey the law discredit Murphy?" queried Bridges.

"Lame Ducks" Discussed

When Bridges stressed the fact that the former Governor is a "lame duck" Minton snapped out, "so is Chief Justice Hughes and so was Chief Justice Taft."

Barkley interposed to ask the Republican Senator sarcastically if the next time the Republicans win an election, they would refrain from appointing "lame ducks" to office.

Vigorously defending his "close and fast friend," Senator Brown asserted that Murphy's defeat was at least partially due to the defection of some members of the Democratic Party organization because of a Murphy-supported civil service law, and because Murphy appointed "too many Republicans to key positions."

Lets "Michigan Control"

Senator Vandenberg explained his negative vote by declaring:

"At the base of the November elections (in Michigan) were the same law and order issues involved in confirmation of the Attorney General to be chief law officer. Since Michigan settled that issue for itself, I have come to the conclusion that Michigan's popular vote rightly must and should control my own vote in this question."

Senator Taft declared that he voted "no" because the nominee "refused to enforce the law when Governor of Michigan and refused to take a position against the lawlessness of the sit-down strike . . . Everybody in Michigan knows that his position encouraged lawlessness." Of Frankfurter, Taft said, "While I do not always agree with his views on the Constitution, I regard him as an able lawyer and an outstanding American."

Senator Bailey, who may lead a Democratic revolt against Hopkins today and tomorrow, criticized Murphy for "temporizing with a mob. Speaking in a hardly audible voice, Bailey said the law must be preserved "even though it involves bloodshed."

Spoonbill Catfish, Rare Specimens, Exhibited Here

Nineteen spoonbill catfish, which ichthyologists consider the most remarkable of all American freshwater fishes, were received at the Commerce Department acquarium yesterday and placed on exhibition.

To science the strange creature is known as Polyodon spathula but its more common popular names are paddle fish, shovel fish, shovel cat, duckbill cat and spadefish, as well as spoonbill cat. They grow to 5 or 6 feet in length and may weigh up to 150 pounds.

The spoonbill cat is found only in the Mississippi Valley and the Yangtze Valley of China. The 19 that arrived yesterday came from the Bureau of Fisheries' station at Louisville, Ky.

'Quoddy' Dam and Ship Canal Fight Is Revived by Roosevelt to disclose his intention in this regard.

Work on both projects was originally started by the Presdient with funds allocated from emergency relief appropriations, and Congress, after spirited controversies extending over three years, refused to supply added funds.

The so-called "Quoddy" project calls for creation of a high-level pool of 37 square miles in Cobscook Bay by construction of a series of dams, a power house, a filling gate structure and a navigation lock. By harnessing the tides, the Government would experiment in power generation, utilizing the difference in head between the Cobscook pool and the Bay of Fundy.

Originally, $10,000,000 was allocated for Passamaquoddy development, and nearly $7,000,000 of this was spent. Work stopped in 1936 when Congress denied funds, and buildings on the site are now used by the National Youth Administration. Brewster said it will require "only a few thousand" to complete the test borings the President asked. Cost of the completed project has been estimated at between $30,000,000 and $47,000,000.

The 195-mile ship canal through the Florida Peninsula, first proposed as far back as 1824, was initiated with PWA funds by the President and some $5,110,000 spent before appropriations were cut off by Congress. Former Chief of Army Engineers Markham favored the project, but it became the center of a bitter sectional storm within Florida itself and in Congress. Completed cost has been estimated at from $143,000,000 to $197,000,000.

The vigorous fight for the ship canal project by the late Senator Fletcher (Democrat), of Florida, is said to have undermined his health and cost his life.

Asked for comment, Chairman Glass of the Senate Appropriations Committee told reporters:

"When this was before the committee before, Judge Fletcher came before me with tears in his eyes and said it would mean his political death if it was defeated. So I let my heart get the better of my mind, and voted this damn fool thing. But it won't be that way this time!"

The letter from the President to Senator Bailey and Representative Mansfield follows:

"There are two subjects to which I hope your committee will give renewed consideration.

"The first relates to the proposed Florida Ship Canal. Surveys have been completed and a good deal of work has been done on this. It has long been my belief that a Florida Ship Canal will be built one of these days and that the building of it is justified today by commercial and military needs. As you know, it has been my thought that the Government should continue its construction, but should take its time in doing this, using as far as possible, relief labor, especially in periods when there is a good deal of unemployment. I would not personally object to a construction period lasting as long as 10 or 15 years. This canal will, according to the engineers, receive in tolls enough revenue to pay for its upkeep and over a period of years to amortize its cost, though it is doubtful that these revenues would take care of accumulated interest charges. In other words, the Government would get its money back without interest.

"The other project relates to the development of tidal power in the Passamaquoddy Bay. Here again some money has been spent. It is my belief that the time will come when there will be a joint agreement between Canada and the United States for the joint development of the larger project which would utilize all tidal power in that bay on both sides of the international line. It is a fact that in eastern Maine the economic situation is, today, at its worst—for the forests have been cut off and the fisheries have greatly declined. In the case of this project, existing surveys are insufficient and it is my thought that an appropriation for the completion of test borings and a determination of the advisability of putting in a small experimental plant on the American side of the border would be justified.

"Very sincerely yours,

"FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT."

President Again To Ask Tax on Federal Wages

uphold the taxes at the present time.

The special Senate committee headed by Senator Brown (Democrat), Michigan, will begin hearings this morning on the question of ending tax exemption. Undersecretary of the Treasury Hanes will present the Administration's views.

If such legislation is enacted, it will mean that employes of the Federal Government living in nearby States will be subject to income taxes levied by those States.

Also employes of State and other local governments would have to pay the Federal income tax.

In addition, interest paid by States, municipalities and other governmental subdivisions on future issues of securities would be subject to the Federal income tax, while the subordinate governments in the same way could tax income from future Federal Government security issues.

In addition to the argument that a constitutional amendment is necessary to settle the tax-exemption question, considerable opposition to legislation for reciprocal taxation of future salaries and security issues has arisen among officials of State and municipal governments. "States' rights," it is contended, would be infringed upon.

Taxation of salaries paid by State and local governments, it is estimated, would yield about $15,000,000 annually. Taxation of income from future security issues eventually would yield an estimated $140,000,000 a year.

Administration officials are anxious to end tax exemption, however, on the ground that it permits discrimination in taxation. They feel also that investors who put their money in tax exempts would turn to investment channels which would stimulate business activity.

shop, ran out, jumped into his car, and started after the youth. Traveling at a rate of 70 to 80 miles an hour, the two cars sped southward over the Washington-Baltimore boulevard.

Policeman Scarboro, who was patrolling the boulevard, heard a radio lookout for the fugitive, and he joined in the chase when the hit-runner and Holland came roaring along 3 miles north of Laurel.

Scarboro said that twice he drew alongside of the escaper and ordered him to halt.

"He tried to run me down," Scarboro said. "Then I began firing, reaching out of my car with my left hand, and driving with my right. I fired four shots and I believe three hit his tires. His car swerved over to the left.

"Just then Holland came tearing along, and plowed right into the escaping car. Holland was lucky to escape. The youth got a bump on his head, but that was about all."

Fleming was charged with speeding, reckless driving, failure to obey a traffic signal, driving on the left side of the street, and hit and run driving. His six colored companions were fined $25 and costs each on charges of disorderly conduct.

Roosevelt Fears Fund Slash May Cut 1,000,000 Off WPA

and allowed him four additional minutes. He left the hearing room complaining he had been "cut off."

Deficiency Bill Pruned

Across the Capitol, the same House Appropriations Committee that trimmed 17 per cent from the relief bill was reported to be pruning the President's first deficiency bill below budget estimates. Chairman Taylor, of the House Appropriations Committee, was called to the White House and for ten minutes discussed the committee situation with the President.

"We discussed appropriations in general and the make-up of my committee," Taylor said on leaving the White House. "I told him we were cutting below budget estimates. He didn't criticize."

President Roosevelt's comment on the House relief action was given in response to a question. He said that if the cut goes through, the sail must be cut to fit the cloth. Estimating 3½ dependents for every person on relief he said a reduction in rolls of 1,000,000 to 1,250,000 persons would force an aggregate of between 4,000,000 and 5,000,000 off relief.

Substantially the same figures had been used in the House by Representative Cannon (Democrat), of Missouri. Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, House subcommittee chairman, accused Cannon of "exaggeration." Woodrum said the rolls could be cut 200,000 a month, from 2,800,000 in February to 2,000,000 in June.

LaGuardia Fights Cut

Adams yesterday suggested reporters figure it out for themselves, by applying the 17 per cent slash to the 3,081,000 now on relief, which would give an aggregate cut of 523,770 relief jobs. He said similar estimates could be obtained by dividing the $62 cost per month for each relief worker into the House cut for any one month. He said Harrington suggested various methods for effecting the reduction in rolls, but never figured the lay-offs in excess of 600,000.

The House Committee estimated the President's figure would provide an average of 2,870,000 relief jobs, against an average of 2,377,049 made available by the $725,000,000.

Mayor LaGuardia, who appeared before the Senate sub-committee, told reporters he "begged" for the full $875,000,000 and did not renew his request for the $915,000,000 the Conference of Mayors said was necessary. He estimated 1,151,300 WPA workers would lose their jobs under the House cut, and declared the large cities are unable financially to care for this load.

Told of LaGuardia's testimony, the President agreed that cities are unable to care for additional relief cases. He said that although cities generally are better off financially than in 1933, so far as existing obligations go, most of them are near their debt limit and unable to take on more relief costs.

The President said his $875,000,000 estimate allowed for only $750,000,000 of the immediate appropriation actually being paid out in the current fiscal year. The balance, he said, would permit ordering of materials and other obligations that would not be paid off until after June 30.

Chairman Adams took issue with LaGuardia's contention that New York is unable to provide additional municipal relief. He commented that New York contributes only 11 per cent toward WPA projects compared to "33 per cent in some other places," and pointed to the city's present tax rate of less than 3 per cent. He said such barriers as exist against additional relief obligations were mostly "legal" and might be overcome by local statute.

Green Adds to Pressure

Additional pressure was placed on the Senate sub-committee to raise the House relief appropriation as Green wrote Adams that any cut in the $875,000,000 recommended by the President "will mean a lowering of relief standards and a decrease in the amount supplied those who have suffered very greatly because of unemployment during the last eight years." Green said unemployment is as great now as it was in 1935 and in the first three months of 1936, when he said jobless totals stood at 10,482,496.

L. H. Bain, economic advisor for the Agriculture Adjustment Administration, yesterday estimated unemployment totals in 1940 will range between 5,000,000 and 6,000,000 unless there is a "more rapid recovery than ever before known." He placed the present unemployment level at 9,000,000.

a rakish angle, as did the late Admiral Beatty, of England. Also, it may be folded and packed easily.

The sport shirt, blue like everything else, is worn open when the soldier is in the field, and with a black tie when he goes promenading with his girl and has on his dress coat with the "bellows" back. This bellows effect gives the soldier much more room to move his arms. No belt goes with the coat; none seems needed.

Leggings the Biggest Hit

The new leggings, canvas with lacings, are like those worn in the Navy. They appear to have made the biggest hit with the soldiers here. First Sergt. Clifford W. Lanham, a wounded veteran of the Meuse-Argonne, with 25 years' service, was talking about them today while his outfit, Company E, Thirty-fourth Infantry, was parading up and down before the newsreel men, showing off the new togs.

"I think we got these roll leggings from the British in France," said Sergt. Lanham. "They are terrible. If they are rolled tight, they keep the blood from circulating. If they get loose and start dragging in the mud, it's pretty hard for a man to keep a soldierly appearance. These canvas leggings have them beaten a mile."

As it marched and maneuvered today in its new uniforms of blue, Company E looked very handsome and dashing. However, there was something wrong, something discordant. It was the shoes. Though the uniform itself, from the cap down to the pants tips, is blue, the shoes are the same as before; tan.

However, that probably will be corrected. It all depends on whether the new uniforms are definitely adopted. They will be on trial for a year, and only the men of Company E will wear them in this section.

"Like It—When Do We Eat?"

The War Department, in announcing the year's trial, said:

"The color was selected because of its apparent excellent camouflage characteristics, blending into surrounding colors much more efficiently than olive drab; its pleasing appearance, and also because of the ease with which this woolen fabric can be produced in quantity.

"The technical difficulties in the production of the standard olive drab are so severe that only a few mills are reasonably successful in meeting Army requirements. These difficulties would be greatly decreased by the adoption of the slate-blue shade, comparatively simple to produce successfully in standard color."

The men of Company E, acting as models for the new uniforms, marched and pirouetted for fully two hours this morning for the benefit of the newsreels. In a lull, a reporter asked one of the soldiers how he liked his new uniform.

"What I want to know," he answered, "is, when do we eat?"

Sixth-Grade Girls Sew Own Costumes As 'Athenian Priestesses;' Boys Hurl Imaginary Javelin, Paper Discus

Greek met Greek yesterday in "Olympic Games" staged by the sixth grade of the Barnard Elementary School. Such Grecian characters as Socrates and Hector cavorted with the mythical heroes, Hercules, Achilles and Ulysses, and came off second best.

"The idea of putting on the "Olympic Games" is to give a practical demonstration of our 'integration' of the social sciences into music, art and physical education," Birch E. Bayh, director of the District schools' department of physical education, explained.

The sixth graders, however, under direction of their teacher, Miss L. R. Kearney, formulated their own interpretation of the famous international contest.

Grecian costumes for the 20 11-year-old "Athenian priestesses" were designed and sewed entirely by the girls. The outnumbered "men of Greece," 11 boys, had to decide how they would throw the javelin, discus and hammer in the small auditorium without hurting any of the onlookers.

They solved this by using only imaginary javelins and hammers. In the discus event, however, they spun pasteboard plates.

The youngsters began working out plans for the "Olympics" early in December, when they were concluding a study of Grecian civilization.

Numerous school officials were in the auditorium as the sixth graders presented Grecian dances, which they planned, or took part in chariot races or other contests of physical prowess. On the stage, Grecian columns framed an Athenian scene designed by the students.

Bernard Kurland, 11, "herald," announced each event, giving along with it the history of the Olympic games. Each contestant wore a band over his shoulder designating him as "Achilles," "Nestor," or other Grecian hero.

Triplets Born Before Dr. Peck Answered Call

In a story published January 13 in The Post it was stated that Dr. Eugene C. Peck, St. Marys County Health Officer, assisted in the birth of triplets at a home near Leonardtown, Md. This statement was in error, Dr. Peck reports and adds:

"I am a full time health officer and do not practice medicine in the sense of delivering babies or caring for sick people except in the routine of preventive medicine . . . When I answered this call for help from the midwife at about 4:15 in the morning I did so because the local storekeeper telephoned that he had called three doctors at the request of the midwife and he had been unable to get any of them to come . . . The only thing I did was to commend the midwife for her good work and gather up the three prematures . . . and take them to the hospital . . ."

In the interest of accuracy The Post is pleased to publish Dr. Peck's statement and regrets the error.

Costigan Dies; Ex-Senator From Colorado

Led Liberal Bloc; Pneumonia Brought Fatal Heart Attack

Denver, Jan. 17 (AP).—Edward P. Costigan, 64, former United States Senator from Colorado, died tonight of a heart attack induced by lobar pneumonia. Costigan, a leader of the Senate's liberal bloc until his retirement in 1936, was stricken yesterday.

The former Senator's wife, Mrs. Mabel C. Costigan, and Miss Josephine Roche, former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury and Costigan's long-time political ally, were at his bedside when death came at his Denver home.

Organizer of the Progressive Party in Colorado and its candidate for Governor in 1912 and 1914, Costigan won election to the Senate in 1930 as a Democrat.

Pioneered Legislation

Stricken with illness physicians blamed on overwork, Costigan retired from active politics in 1936 and did not seek re-election.

Costigan pioneered during the latter years of President Hoover's Republican administration some legislative principles since carried out by President Roosevelt's New Deal.

He sponsored the Jones-Costigan act, which gave Government bounties to domestic sugar beet growers. The principle of his bill has been expanded in the present sugar act, under which growers receive benefit payments from a processing tax.

An advocate of public works, Costigan argued for public control and operation of such projects as Boulder Dam and Muscle Shoals, now expanded into the Tennessee Valley Authority.

Costigan had no children. He is survived by his wife and a brother, George P. Costigan, jr., a professor of law at the University of Colorado and former dean of the Denver University law school.

In 1914 he served as attorney for the United Mine Workers during a Congressional investigation into the Colorado coal strike. President Wilson appointed him to the Federal Tariff Commission in 1916. He resigned in 1923 to attack Hoover Administration policies.

dent is waiting to see the reorganization report.

At his press conference later in the day President Roosevelt said that his conversation with Randolph was of a general nature.

A few weeks ago Mr. Roosevelt indicated at a conference with Chairman Collins, of the House subcommittee on District appropriations, that he favored larger appropriations for the health department.

Representative Jack Nichols (Democrat), Oklahoma, will conduct the public hearings and direct the drafting of new District revenue legislation, Chairman Randolph announced upon receipt of the 150-page report on District taxes.

Nichols will be appointed chairman of the sub-committee that he headed last year, Randolph said, and Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, will head the minority group.

Public hearings on the $13,200,000 tax program will be called within a few weeks, it is expected.

The first formal statement regarding the proposed tax plan came yesterday from the District Communist Party.

It praised the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation for refusing to indorse the report and said its neutral action should be considered a repudiation "of the obnoxious features of this report, particularly the sales tax."

Thirty-five members of the Men's Club headed by Richard K. Smith as president will do the work even to peeling potatoes tonight. George I. Snyder, chairman of the dinner, yesterday announced the menu will include roast beef, carrots and peas, potatoes, pineapple salad and apple pie.

The chief cooks will be Carl E. Maier and James C. Hollister.

Russia Raises Production by 12% in 1938

But Campaign to 'Surpass Capitalists' Was 8% Short of Plans

By Joseph Barnes.
Special Cable to The Post.

Moscow, Jan. 17.—The Bolshevik campaign to "overtake and surpass capitalist industry" today gave the first general accounting of its success and failures in more than a year.

A six-line report of the nation's industries during 1938 showed they had produced 12 per cent more than in 1937, but 8 per cent less than planned.

Publication of these figures followed a month in which the entire country had been mobilized for the campaign to improve labor discipline and increase productivity.

The figures showed 1938 industrial production was 77,000,000,000 rubles, compared with the 1937 figure of 69,000,000,000. Heavy industries showed a 15 per cent advance over the previous year. Light industry increased by only 5.5 per cent.

The figures showed a serious lag behind the planned figures. The original second five-year plan estimated industrial production during 1937 would amount to 92,000,000,000. The annual control plan for 1937 raised the ante to 103,000,000,600. Actual production that year was revealed officially today for the first time.

Last year the Kremlin whittled down production plans to 84,000,000,000, and today's figures showed that this plan was 92 per cent fulfilled.

First Lady Lists Economic Security, Education, Free Information as Safeguards of Democracy

Harris & Ewing.

Mrs. Roosevelt, Hope Ridings Miller (center), president of the Women's National Press Club, and Jan Masaryk, son of Czecho-Slovakia's late president-founder, at the club's luncheon yesterday. Masaryk was the guest speaker

Economic security, education, and free sources of information were listed by Mrs. Roosevelt at her press conference yesterday as the three safeguards of democracy.

She urged upon newswomen an alertness which would detect possible exercises of control from the Government "as has happened in other countries," and also control from "other sources."

"There are bankers, subscribers, and advertisers, you know," she smiled.

Enough education to give the people an understanding of the Government and its problems is an essential to democracy's continuation, the First Lady declared.

Envoy to China Hastens Here

New York, Jan. 17 (U.P.).—Nelson T. Johnson, United States Ambassador to China, returned home tonight aboard the French liner Ile de France and departed for Washington, where he is expected to confer with Secretary of State Cordell Hull tomorrow. He was called home by President Roosevelt for report and consultation on the Far East situation.

Johnson was noncommittal on events in China and dodged every question as to what the probable outcome of the struggle might be. He indicated, however, that the Chinese have no intention of suing for peace.

Hitler Bids Balkan States Into Pact Against Soviet

Berlin, Jan. 17 (AP).—Reichsfuehrer Hitler was reported tonight to be working to construct what might be called an anti-Geneva front of nations bound together by their common detestation of communism.

The reports circulated after Count Csaky, Hungarian foreign minister, was said to have promised Hungary would adhere to the German-Italian-Japanese anti-Communist pact.

Rumania and Yugoslavia were said to be next on Hitler's list for overtures on behalf of the anti-Comintern adherents.

Rome, Jan. 17 (AP).—Italy began helping Germany line up the Balkan countries for the Rome-Berlin axis tonight by sending Count Galeazzo Ciano, foreign minister and son-in-law of Premier Mussolini, to Yugoslavia.

Fascists indicated a bloc of Italy, Hungary and Yugoslavia, as an adjunct to the Rome-Berlin axis, was Ciano's aim.

be an extraordinarily disturbing factor."

Return French Medals

Rome, Jan. 17 (AP).—Italian bitterness against France was emphasized further today by the surrender of French World War medals by Italian veterans after Gen. Silvio Mussino sent his own Croix de Guerre to a Rome newspaper with a proposal that all French-decorated Italian veterans turn in their medals.

The medals began to pour in with letters expressing disgust at having "defended swinish France."

Newspapers attacked a statement attributed to the Paris Midi that "only imperious necessity can make Italian sailors lose sight of their native shores."

"The 'imperious necessity' is about to become apparent," said Il Messaggero of Rome. "If provocations continue, other shores will be visited soon by sailors of his Italian Majesty."

Il Tevere, of Rome, said 44,000,000 Italians "spit in the face of the Third Republic," which "patiently is wiping its face with sheets of its newspapers."

Won't Aid Spain

Paris, Jan. 17 (AP).—France apparently decided today to stay clear of the Spanish war.

The government said it would not give aid to the Spanish government unless Britain did, and Britain was determined not to intervene. Risk of a European war was considered too great.

(Informed British sources said Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax told French Foreign Minister Bonnet, at Geneva, Britain would not intervene in the Spanish war "regardless of the fate of Barcelona" or of any French desire to aid the Spanish government.

(It was stated reliably in London that Prime Minister Chamberlain had drafted a memorandum for the cabinet recommending that Britain follow the policy of nonintervention in Spain "to the letter.")

French government leaders wrestled with the problem throughout the day and at one point considered the advisability of acting on their own, but the old bugaboo of a war in which France might find herself alone, seemingly was too much.

Bonnet wound up the day by announcing that France would revise her policy of nonintervention in Spain only if Britain did. He was careful, however, not to close the door too tightly on the hopes of a considerable portion of the French Parliament, which was demanding help for Spain's government.

France and Britain, he said, were conferring on a compromise solution which might end Italian and German aid to the Spanish insurgents without risking war. The nature of the plan was not disclosed.

[The Post's special correspondent said Bonnet, in justifying the decision to the Chamber of Deputies will doubtless make great play of Premier Mussolini's pledge to withdraw Italian troops from Spain and the Balearics as soon as Gen. Franco has won the war.

[But the real reason that the French government does not aid the Spanish republic, The Post correspondent said, is its fear of provoking a general European war. Rome's threat to "resume its liberty of action"—meaning it will throw off the mask of neutrality and intervene openly on Franco's side—if France permits munitions to pass through to the loyalists, has been heard in Paris.—Editor's note.]

Curiosity Got Him Into War Loyalist Former G-Man Says

Levenson Takes Up Duties as Secretary Of Friends of Abraham Lincoln Brigade; Will Try to Raise Funds for the Wounded

In his new office at the Friends of the Abraham Lincoln Brigade headquarters, 734 Jackson place, Lieut. Leonard Levenson, 26, former G-man, spoke yesterday without rancor of the men he has fought within the past two months.

LEVENSON

Levenson, twice wounded in Spain, was appointed last week secretary of the Washington Branch of the Friends. His new duties, which he thinks will be near completion in six months, entail raising funds for the rehabilitation of wounded and maimed American veterans of the International Brigade.

The former F. B. I. fingerprint expert joined Spain's loyalist forces while on leave from the Department of Justice in 1937.

He received his degree of LL.M. at George Washington University in 1936 and had previously graduated from New York University in 1934 with an LL. B. degree.

Levenson asserts he had no idea of going to Spain when he left America, but one day in Paris he happened upon the International Brigade headquarters, entered and came out a prospective volunteer with instructions on how to cross the French border at Perpignan into Spain. Once launched on the venture, curiosity drove him onward till the recruiting officer got him on the Spanish side.

Levenson's first assignment was with the Mackenzie-Papineau Canadian Brigade, with whom he saw action at Fuentes d'Ebro. After Teruel he was given command of a machine gun company with the Abraham Lincoln Brigade.

"There were about six Washington boys in the war," he said. He thinks Edward Young and Thaddeus Battle, still alive, and Sidney Shostek, killed early in the war, are among these.

Arabs Accept Bid To Palestine Talk

Beirut, Lebanon, Jan. 17 (AP).—The Arab nationalist high command of Palestine today accepted Britain's invitation to a conference in London next month on the future of the Holy Land.

Four points were laid down as a basis for negotiations: Arab independence, abandonment of the program for making Palestine a Jewish national home, abolition of the British mandate and cessation of foreign immigration.

Negro Alliance Session Weighs Social Justice

Nabritt Says Solution Of Race Problem Here Depends on Suffrage

Social and economic justice were topics of discussion at a meeting of the New Negro Alliance last night at the auditorium of the Lincoln Temple Congregational Church. Speakers included Dr. J. N. Nabritt, of Howard University School of Law, and Dr. Charles H. Houston, counsel of the National Association for Advancement of Colored People.

Need of proper interpretation and administration of existing laws, Dr. Nabritt said, constitute a large part of the problem of the colored race as a minority group in America.

He indicated the solution of racial problems in the District of Columbia as practically possible only through suffrage and consequent legislation with reference to civil rights, including especially the right to live under acceptable standards of health and housing.

Dr. Houston spoke of procedures and attitudes of the colored group tending to produce an enlightened public opinion favoring a change of attitude of the dominant group, as to the extent of tolerance and co-operation.

Chamberlain's Home Guarded In Bombings

Irishmen Living in England Rounded Up By Police

By the Associated Press.

London, Jan. 17.—Police guards were intensified at public utility properties and homes of officials, including that of Prime Minister Chamberlain, today while searches were pressed for perpetrators of a series of bombings

Scotland Yard attributed the explosions to the illegal Irish Republican army. Ten occurred yesterday in London, Manchester, Liverpool, Birmingham, Belfast and other cities. Another today damaged a power line pylon in Birmingham. Public services were partly disrupted.

Police said they believed the blasts were intended to signalize anger of the I. R. A., which opposes both the Ireland (Eire) and Northern Ireland (Ulster) governments, with British control of Ireland

Police rounded up Irishmen living in England in the search for possible ringleaders.

Scotland Yard operatives took charge of the investigation in consultation with Home Secretary Sir Samuel Hoare and narrowed their operations to finding six men they "wanted for questioning."

A large number of unexploded bombs were uncovered in Birmingham.

In Dublin it was said the Irish Republican army had been inactive for a year until an appeal was made during the week-end for its reorganization.

Most of the explosions did comparatively little damage, but one workman was killed and two were injured at Manchester fighting flames caused by a blast.

Special Military Plans

Copyright, 1939, by the United Press.

London (Wednesday), Jan. 18. (U.P.) Great Britain and France speeded elaborate naval and military preparations today for possible trouble in the Mediterranean.

Gen. Maurice Gamelin, chief of the French general staff, accompanied by Vice Admiral Darlan, naval chief of staff, left to inspect French defenses in the Mediterranean. London announced that Viscount Gort, chief of the Imperial general staff, will make a similar tour extending as far as Palestine beginning January 22.

More than 70 French warships left Brest and Toulon today for maneuvers off Gibraltar. The British will arrive off Gibraltar on January 22 for combined naval, air and military exercises.

Official quarters declined to say whether the arrangements were connected with threats by Italy, backed by Germany against France. Well informed quarters, however, believe that they were more than a coincidence.

$200,000,000 Canal By-Pass Is Vital, War Chiefs Declare

Defense

Clarence S. Ridley, of the Canal Zone, is expected here soon with details of the plan.

Chairman May, of the House Military Affairs Committee, said Gen. H. H. Arnold, chief of the Army Air Corps, will appear before an open session of the committee today on aviation defense estimates.

May indicated the new Army defense measures recommended by the President will be met in a series of eight of nine bills. Draft bills are at the War Department, where they are being revised to avoid conflict with existing authorizations.

May is expected to offer one bill going beyond the President's defense recommendations, to provide about $200,000,000 for strengthening of the Panama Canal. The President had asked only for new barracks and increased garrisons. May said the canal should be improved in lieu of building another canal through Nicaragua, which has been proposed at various times.

Another bill will provide the full amount asked, $300,000,000, for new Army airplanes, without designating the number it will provide. Another will provide for 31,000 additional Army pilots and mechanics, still another for "educational orders" asked by the President to help private industry prepare to meet defense needs.

Chairman Sheppard, of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, revealed that Senator Lee (Democrat), Oklahoma, had suggested at the hearing that a Cabinet post of Secretary of Air be established to coordinate all the aviation fighting forces. A Secretary of National Defense was another suggestion.

The letter by Gen. Rivers, who saw service in the Philippines, said:

"The customary strategic designation for a fortification of such a place as Guam—almost 4,000 miles from our powerful defense base at Hawaii—is that of a salient. In this case Guam would be a far-away and indefensible salient.

"Should Japan establish a fortified air, submarine and destroyer base on the strategic flank of the United States—say Lower California—the people of our country would naturally consider such action as threat to the safety of the United States.

"... Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of naval operations, told the naval committees of Congress last year that the Navy would be 'seriously' inadequate to the task of sending a naval expedition to the Philippines. Again he said: 'I doubt if we could undertake such an expedition with three times the increases.'"

Meanwhile, it was disclosed that recommendations that the coast and international boundaries of the United States be adequately mapped in preparation for possible military invasion had been made by Maj. William Bowie, president of the Society of American Military Engineers, in a recent letter to President Roosevelt.

St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 17.—In a speech entitled "America's Wings," which he delivered here tonight to the annual convention of the National Aeronautic Association, Col. Louis Johnson, Assistant Secretary of War, declared, "We must make the wings of America a force so strong that no nation in the world would dare launch an attack against us." Neither land nor sea power is sufficient in the world today, he said.

He urged an immediate expansion of military aviation, referring to a speech he made two months ago in Boston where he said that this country "must double, treble and perhaps even quadruple our present air force."

Air Training Of 20 Million Pupils Sought

Aviation Leaders Hold Program Essential to Roosevelt College Plan

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, Jan. 17.—Between 17,000,000 and 20,000,000 American school children must be taught the theory of mechanical flight each year under a system similar to those in Europe, aviation leaders decided in convention here today.

The scheme will be dovetailed with the Government's program for teaching thousands of college students to fly.

"It will constitute," said William R. Enyart, secretary of the National Aeronautic Association, "the answer of democratic government in the Western Hemisphere to the stupendous training programs under way in the totalitarian countries of Europe."

By resolution, the association prepared to encourage the instruction of school children in model-making and, later, in gliding; to organize civic groups to support air education in the public schools; and press for a division of air education in the Federal Office of Education.

Charles F. Horner, of Washington, association president, said the youth program would be vital to President Roosevelt's proposal to train 20,000 college students annually to handle the controls of an airplane.

"But," he added, "we want it to be part of existing curriculi in the public schools, rather than so many added courses. A youngster in a chemistry class can be told the nature of aircraft metals without being burdened with extra studies."

Horner, today was re-elected president of the association. Reelected governors at large included Orville Wright.

Erika Mann, Writer's Daughter, To Discuss German Schools

'Children in Goosestep,' Her Book, Subject of Talk to Be Given Jan. 28

ERIKA MANN

Erika Mann, actress-author daughter of Thomas Mann, famed writer, will discuss "Children in Goosestep, or School for Barbarians," a talk dealing with treatment and education of German children under the Nazi regime, at a luncheon meeting in the Mayflower Hotel January 28. The luncheon is sponsored by the Barnard College Club of Washington.

Miss Mann, internationally known for both her acting and writing, has been living outside Germany with other members of the Mann family since the rise of Hitler in 1933. She did venture back, disguised, to rescue the manuscript of her father's novel, "Joseph and His Brethren."

A pupil of Max Reinhardt, she first appeared on the stage in Berlin, Munich and Hamburg. She wrote, directed and acted in "Peppermill," a satirical revue performed more than 1,000 times in six countries. She has written travel and children's books, her latest being "School for Barbarians." A volume in which she and her brother, Klaus, collaborated. "Escape to Life," will be published this year.

Mrs. David Barr, president of the Barnard Club, announced that the luncheon will be open to the public. Reservations are available through Mrs. James E. Carroll, 312 North Piedmont street, Arlington, Chestnut 6693, and Mrs. Frank S. Phillips, 3125 Nebraska avenue northwest, Woodley 7171.

"United Press Corespondent William Lander was warned Monday by the chief of the official press bureau, Augustin Arrovo, that there is no interest in the outside world about Mexico's deals with Germany, and it was indicated to him that the government wanted its news to come exclusively from the press bureau," Kluckhohn asserted.

Documentary evidence that Germany engaged in widespread sabotage work in the United States before the United States entered the war was presented the German-American Mixed Claims Commission yesterday by counsel for American claimants in the Black Tom and Kingsland, N. J., disasters.

William D. Mitchell, former Attorney General, introduced a long secret German military report found by Dr. Otto Ernest in the Vienna war archives in April, 1935, which had been received from German army headquarters and distributed to the Austrian military intelligence bureau.

"According to the latest news 21 more ammunition factories have been blown up," the report said with reference to the United States. It was dated April 27, 1917.

Japanese Ask U. S. to Lower Migration Bar

Suggest Chinese Open Door Will Be Retained If Concession Is Made

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, Jan. 17.—Domei, Japan's national news agency, indicated today that lowering of the United States' and British dominions' bars to Oriental immigration might be made a Japanese condition for maintenance of the "open door" for trade of Western powers in China.

The agency said that Japan was willing to negotiate separately with the United States and Britain concerning the future of their commerce in China, but that guarantees of equal commercial opportunity there must be in return for concessions strengthening Nippon's world position.

Asks Co-ordinated Action

Geneva, Jan. 17 (AP).—China today asked the League of Nations to establish an independent committee to co-ordinate the action of all world powers, including non-members of the League, which are interested in halting Japan's march into China.

The proposal, made by V. K. Wellington Koo, Chinese Ambassador to France and delegate to the League, was designed primarily to bring action taken by the United States into line with moves made or contemplated by Britain, France and Soviet Russia.

Koo also surged the League Council, whose meeting he addressed, to ask members to extend financial and economic help to China, to place an embargo on shipments of oil and airplanes to Japan and to assure the free transit of war materials to China.

Closing Of Key Bridge

Georgetown businessmen have good reason to complain over the partial closing of Key Bridge. Some of them report that their business has slumped as much as 75 per cent since the bridge was closed to private automobile traffic a week ago. If the estimate of ten months to complete the extra span at the southern end of the bridge is correct, some merchants and service establishments may be bankrupt before normal traffic can be resumed.

The protest against this situation voiced by the Georgetown Businessmen's Association is not designed to hinder the improvement. Undoubtedly the business interests of that section are delighted to see the George Washington Memorial Highway extended, and the essential alterations of Key Bridge under way. But they don't want their business to collapse while the work is going forward.

In undertaking large projects of this kind some inconvenience to individual interests must be anticipated. But it does appear that the present restrictions against automobile traffic over Key Bridge, while street cars, buses and trucks continue to use the span, are unusually severe.

Since the District Commissioners have control over the bridge, they might well scrutinize the restrictions to see wherein they might reasonably be relaxed. The Bureau of Public Roads, which is in charge of the alterations, has already indicated a willingness to relieve the situation where it is practical to do so.

Dr. Aranha's Visit

Pan-Americanism is developing into a sturdy tree. But it will need constant watering if it is to continue to flourish.

At Lima, last month, the 21 republics of this hemisphere recemented the ties of friendship that bind them together. Valuable as these inter-American conferences are, however, their underlying objectives can only be obtained with the aid of constant exchanges of views during the interim years. It is quite fitting, therefore, that as a supplement to the Lima parley there is to be a visit to Washington, in February, by Dr. Oswaldo Aranha, Brazilian minister of foreign affairs, probably only the first of many bilateral exchanges of viewpoint with the statesmen of Latin America.

With Brazil our relations have always been friendly and mutually profitable. More than ever is it necessary at this time for the two nations, each the largest and most populous nation of its respective continent, to understand each other better and to work together. And in Dr. Aranha, Brazil has a statesman who fully appreciates this need.

During his tenure as Ambassador in Washington, Dr. Aranha learned to know and to like America, its institutions and its people. This liking is fully reciprocated. For personal reasons, as well as in his official capacity, he will receive a most cordial welcome as a visitor next month. And the outcome of the conversations he will have with President Roosevelt, Secretary Hull and other officials seems destined to be fruitful and constructive.

Pacific Outpost

It is reported from Tokyo that the Japanese are very much disturbed by the possibility that the United States may fortify Guam as part of the current rearmament program.

The reason for the alarm is not hard to find. This tiny American island lies between Japan and the islands of the Caroline and Marshall groups now under Japanese mandate. While serving as a barrier to Japanese naval penetration into the eastern Pacific, i. e., in the direction of our west coast and the Panama Canal, Guam could also be used as a base from which to defend the Philippines. Japanese protests regarding the fortifications of Guam are understandable. But they are also illogical.

At the Washington conference, of 1921-22, the United States agreed not to fortify Guam. That was part of the price paid by this country for Japan's acceptance of the 5-5-3 ratio with respect to capital ship strength. Were the Washington treaty still in force, the United States would still be bound by the clause prohibiting the fortification of Guam. It is due to no American desire that the naval limitation treaty has lapsed.

Some years ago Japan decided that it was no longer to her interest to be bound by its terms. Tokyo wanted to regain freedom of action in the naval sphere. With the Washington treaty scrapped Japan has this freedom. There is now nothing but her own budgetary situation to prevent the enlargement of her fleet, capital ships and all, to the American or British level and beyond.

By the same token, however, the United States and Great Britain are also free to ignore the restrictions that once obtained with respect to naval construction and the fortification of certain Pacific bases. Indeed, the fact that the offset for the non-fortification of Guam is gone itself raises the question whether, as a defensive measure, the United States should not establish a really effective naval base in the western Pacific.

Lost Local Revenue

From two independent sources the Overton formula for division of Washington's governmental expenses between Federal and local taxpayers has just been given very positive support. The District Tax study, completed by experts for the Joint Congressional Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation, sharply emphasizes the loss of revenue resulting from increasing Federal property holdings in the District. And the new Federal Real Estate Board, established by the President, provides an excellent mechanism for analyzing the proposed solution.

The tax report does not suggest any formula to replace the haphazard practice of appropriating a lump-sum payment to the District. But it supplies precisely the factual information that is needed to back up Senator Overton's proposal. It shows that the Government is rapidly increasing its local tax-free holdings. "About 36 per cent of the entire taxable and exempt real property acreage (land area) in the District," says the report, "belongs to the National Government. It is apparent that the problems created by continued acquisition of real property by the National Government will grow increasingly acute."

President Roosevelt's new Federal Real Estate Board will study Federal ownership of real estate and its bearing upon State and local taxation in all parts of the country. In no other city, however, will it find a situation comparable to that existing here. Federal property exempt from local taxes in other cities is negligible. In 47 cities the tax experts found that Federal property represents on an average less than 3 per cent of the tax-exempt real estate. In the District more than 80 per cent of the exempt property is owned by the Government.

These findings indicate the unique character of Washington's fiscal problem. They fully justify adoption of a fixed policy of reimbursing the Nation's Capital for its loss of revenue from Federal property, regardless of whether any adjustments on a Nation-wide scale appear desirable. And since the District problem is by far the most acute, it might well become the board's first project.

It is especially appropriate that this matter should be considered along with the proposed new local tax system. If the program outlined by the tax experts is accepted, the burden on home owners will be relieved to some extent. But it will still be heavy, and must continue so until the city's one big industry—government—assumes its share of responsibility for community undertakings.

Already the proposed new levies have aroused opposition from some members of Congress. If those legislators will give whole-hearted support to an equitable division of expenses, such as is provided by the Overton formula, the tax bill can be made less onerous.

Interstate Tariffs

It is a strange paradox that, while the Department of State has been working to reduce barriers to international trade, a thriving crop of restrictions upon commerce within our own country has sprung up. The public is just beginning to wake up to the seriousness of these interstate barriers. It does not seem conceivable that they will be tolerated when the issue is fully understood. But at present they operate to protect monopolistic interests within a considerable number of States.

Like many international trade barriers, these restrictions are largely products of depression. To stimulate inactive industries various State legislatures devised means of cutting off competition from other States. But these moves frequently led to retaliation, to discriminatory taxation, boycotts and general ill-feeling between neighbor States.

Undoubtedly the movement has been accentuated by the twenty-first amendment which prohibits the shipment of liquor across State lines in violation of State law. That provision was intended only to protect the dry States. But it permits the States to impose liquor tariffs for protection of their local industries. Just recently that power was recognized by the Supreme Court in an opinion written by Justice Brandeis.

Fortunately, this poorly drafted amendment applied only to intoxicants. But the States have found various other means of restraining trade at their borders. Butter-producing States lay prohibitive taxes on oleomargarine. Some of the States famous for their citrus fruits use inspection laws to stifle competition. Dairy interests are also sometimes protected under the guise of safeguarding the public health. According to former Gov. James V. Allred of Texas, writing in State Government, one legislature has gone so far as to give preference to textbooks by authors living in the State.

Several restrictive devices of this sort, including the "use tax," have been found to be constitutional by the Supreme Court in spite of the fact that the States are forbidden to lay tariffs. It is extremely difficult to draw the line between legitimate taxes and levies intended to handicap the products of other States.

In many instances the only practical way to meet the issue seems to be through interstate co-operation. The Council of State Governments has already done some effective work along that line. As the public becomes more fully aware of the dangers to our national economy resulting from these short-sighted tactics, a great increase in the demand for the good offices of the council may be expected.

Mr. Justice Frankfurter

Without a dissenting vote the Senate yesterday confirmed the nomination of Felix Frankfurter as a justice of the Supreme Court.

The action is, of course, a tribute to the man. But beyond that it must be regarded as an affirmation of faith in the vital institution of which this famous professor of jurisprudence now becomes a part. In the last analysis the Supreme Court is nothing more than the sum of the character, the learning and the wisdom of the judges who compose its membership. In each of these respects the bench of last resort is strengthened by the present appointment.

Mr. Justice Frankfurter combines that healthy respect for tradition and that strong inclination toward progress which the Supreme Court must synthesize to insure stability for our form of government. His record is that of a man who seeks to build, but knows that all lasting construction is determined by defined foundations.

The great justices of the Supreme Court have always been of this type. Justice Holmes was an outstanding example. So was Justice Cardozo. Succeeding to the seat of those great jurists, Mr. Justice Frankfurter has the heavy responsibility of conservatively carrying onward the same sense of constitutional law as a living, growing, healthy organism.

If the Supreme Court could interpret the Constitution only in the light of a dead past there would be room for grave anxiety as to the future of the American system of government. The same would be true if the members of the court were ignorant of the enduring principles underlying the organic law, and of the need of holding to these principles as the guiding line of social and political evolution.

Mr. Justice Frankfurter has a due reverence for the permanence of principle and a proper impatience with the restraints of purely archaic forms. His sense of discrimination is as keen as that shown by the President in making this nomination, and by the Senate in confirming it without a word of debate.

Decline Of Lying

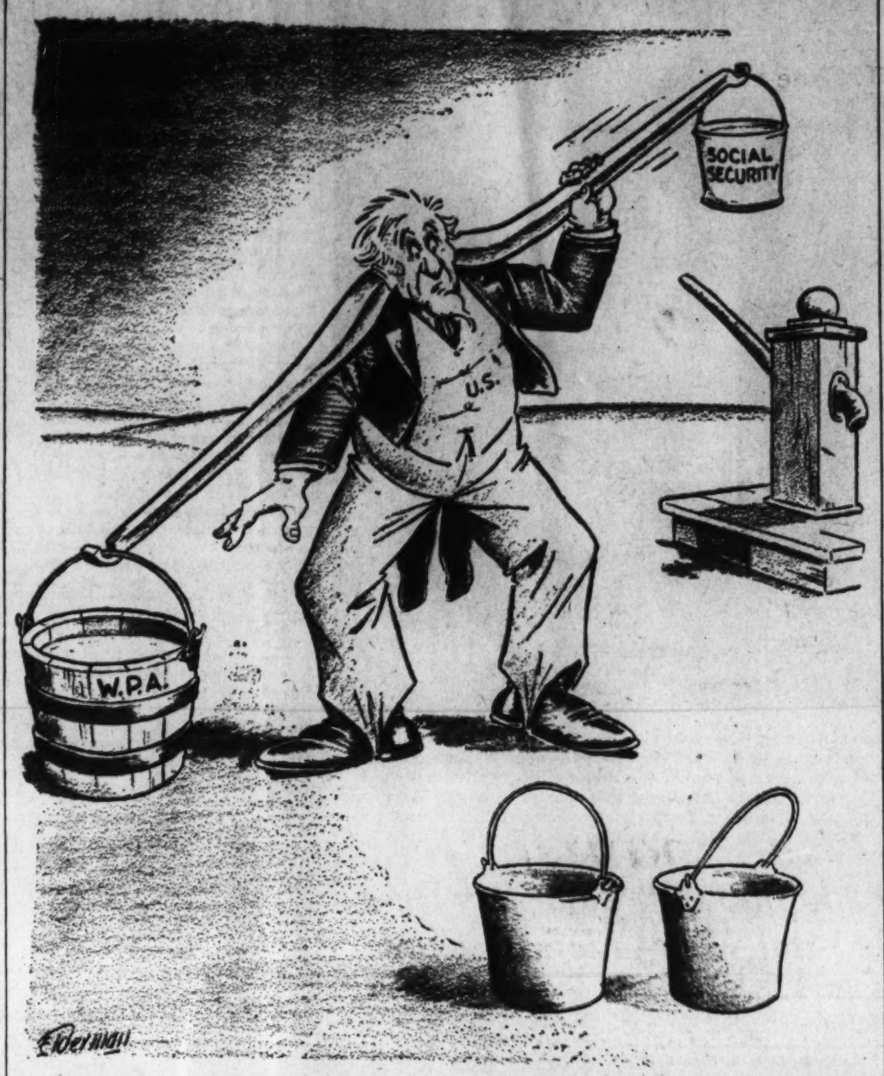
From the Hartford Courant

The Burlington Liars' Club has made its tenth annual award for the best lie of the year. It goes to a tale submitted by a young man who claimed to have fed the fires of a steam trawler with dogfish bark. As modern tall stories go, the prize-winning lie wasn't so bad, but this is an unimaginative age, whose whoppers are not to be compared with the older classics. Like the art of correspondence, the art of lying has fallen on evil days, perhaps for the same reason just as the telephone, the telegraph and the high-speed transportation have put a crimp in the leisurely letter-writing of another generation, can it not be argued that the art of spinning whoppers has declined because few lies can match in ingenuity the actual products of science?

Be that as it may, there can be little question that the modern lie is a degenerate thing. For one thing, it lacks the fresh approach. Caesar could write of the German aurochs, that kneeless wild ox that could not recover its feet if it fell down, but Caesar had two advantages. First, nature-faking was newer in his day than it is now; second, he could make life unpleasant for any one who scoffed openly at the story. Today, the teller of the tall story faces heavier competition than Caesar dreamed; his tale must not only outdo the all-but-incredible truth but it must not repeat the substance of the lies that have been invented in the 2,000 years since Caesar's time. It is a difficult assignment, and perhaps one had best not complain because the prize-winning lie of 1938 was no more than a pun.

There was a time when the lie was part of the Yankee tradition, when the tale of the rapids on the upper Connecticut that were so swift that they would float a crowbar could be told with a straight face. From New England—through the pen of Frank Stockton, if one recalls correctly—came the stories of the fog that was so thick that one man shingled it instead of his house and another who fell off a mast floated softly to the ground just as a tin plate sinks in the water. And from Connecticut came Lou Stone, the last of the great New England liars. But today, the art is in the final stages of decay; only the radio testimonial remains to recall a once-proud tradition.

The Balance Seems Uneven



The Spanish Issue Debated

All communications must carry the writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the Editor's discretion. In fairness to other correspondents brevity is requested. Letters are subject to condensation.

Threat Of Communism

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The editorial "If Franco Wins" in your issue of yesterday is impressive and forceful. It sets forth clearly and argues logically the dangers to this country of the spread of Fascism and Naziism, but why does it disregard the far greater threat of communism?

If it be admitted, though only for the sake of argument and brevity, that a Nationalist victory in Spain might possibly favor the Italian and German "isms," we must also face the existing fact—for it is, not a mere opinion, but a fact widely known through not widely emphasized—that the ambulant government now at Barcelona is already a communistic government under the control of Moscow. It can no longer properly claim to be the Spanish Republic we recognized in 1931.

You and I are striving for the same end in our desire to preserve the form of Government established in this country by our colonial forebears. Let us by all means keep the door closed to Fascism and Naziism, but let us also realize that communism has already entered and expel it. IRWIN LAUGHLIN.

Washington, Jan. 16.

'A Source Of Deep Regret'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: During a stay of almost two years in Spain I came to know all classes of its people—peasants, nobles, soldiers, scholars, artists, businessmen and priests. I came home in 1915 an ardent Hispanophile. I have remained an admirer of a strong and sound people, who deserved much better of their former rulers than they received. At that time the republic was only the dream of a few liberals. The dominant political and social order was still medieval, with nobility, army and church resisting any change which might benefit the Spanish masses or otherwise modernize the nation.

Instead of leading in the movement for social reform, or at least compromising with it, the Spanish hierarchy was as intransigeant and benighted as the landed nobility. It was concerned only with the defense of its ancient privileges and the preservation of its vested interests. In all respects its attitude was different from that of the Catholic Church in this country, which has an active social consciousness.

The reactionary Spanish clergy have never given more than lip service to the papacy's liberal and humane position on social justice. And since the national church refused to identify itself with the legitimate aspirations of the Spanish people for greater enlightenment, economic opportunity and political liberties, it was inevitable that the church should espouse the cause of Franco in the present civil war. It was as natural that it should feel the resentment of the Spanish people, who were betrayed by those who should have been their champions.

To brand the loyalists as communists may suit the purpose of the church, as it does that of Italy and Germany, but it is not convincing to those who understand the Spanish character and the fundamental aspirations of the Spanish people. Japan has resorted to the same trick in order to enlist the sympathy of the world in her war against China.

In aligning itself so passionately with its misguided brethren in Spain the American priesthood is evidently inspired by the solidarity of the corporate interests of the church. It is certainly not moved by the larger consideration of humanity and social policy which are so close to the heart of the Pontiff. Moreover, by allying itself with the rebel cause the Catholic Church in the United States has made itself a partner of fascism in its war with democracy. It has become an ally of Nazi Germany, which has persecuted the Catholic Church in that country and in Austria, and of Fascist Italy, Germany's partner in international brigandage.

The American hierarchy has placed itself in the unenviable position of denying its own best tenets and of placing itself on the side of forces against which this country has declared itself so unreservedly. To one who has only the utmost respect for the Catholic Church as a great historical tradition and spiritual force in the world, the spectacle is, indeed, a source of deep regret. AMIGO DE ESPANA.

Says We Are Communists

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Well, your paper set an all time record Friday, January 13, in making clear its stand in the Spanish situation. Out of eight letters on your editorial page, six letters (presumably from communists—under instruction of the Communist Party) appeared urging the lifting of the embargo. Why don't you and the rest of the communists give up or go over to Russia and send out your propaganda from there. Real Americans in this country don't go for that kind of trash! If you're a communist you stand apart from all religion, be it Catholic, Methodist, Presbyterian, Baptist et al. I am a Methodist, a very good churchgoer. We ally ourselves with Catholics, Jews, and all forms of religion so you communists need not look for aid from us. We believe in God, all of us—so again, I say don't look for our support. We want to keep the embargo so the people of Spain can enjoy worshiping Christ as they are doing freely now in the better part of Spain which is under Franco's control. Down with communists . . . we'll take God!

On Freedom Of Thought

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: One subject that appears to be harped upon more than others at the present time, is what is referred to as "toleration" in the matter of religion—that is a feeling of "goodfellowship" between good and evil, the acceptance of error with truth, with error predominating. Let us not be deceived. Tolerance, both in politics and religion, is the result of the great Reformation of the Sixteenth Century, when men's minds were set free from a totalitarian form of Christianity. From that time on, in spite of persecution to subdue the free spirit that God has given to man, generation after generation has sought higher and nobler things, resulting in our own Declaration of Independence and our Federal Constitution.

Influences are arising that would subvert these great principles of government. One of these is a totalitarian ecclesiasticism that would rule the minds of men. This influence would turn our course of action backward; it would result in overturning our free institutions and destroying our liberties as a Nation. There can be no tolerance while this menace prevails.

Instead of lip service, the great principles that are the foundation of our free Government should be proclaimed throughout the land. Peoples, like those of loyalist Spain and Mexico, should have our moral and material support to continue the fight for political, economic and spiritual freedom. The enemies of human liberty are alive and active. Let the sons and daughters of freedom be equally vigilant!

Barcelona Is Not Winning

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your editorial, "If Franco Wins," you said that "the anxiety of most Americans to prevent the spread of totalitarian doctrine in the New World is unmistakable," and that an "enormous impetus to such indoctrination" will certainly result from a Nationalist victory.

You, however, fail to point out that such would equally follow in the wake of a loyalist victory.

According to your reasoning if "Franco is deeply in debt to Mussolini and Hitler" no less so are the loyalists to Stalin, and therefore "it would be childish to assume that those who have paid the piper are going to refrain from calling the tune. And one place where the pay-off must be anticipated is in Latin America," Mexico already being a willing pupil.

I abhor all forms of totalitarian state, and so hate that exemplified by Russia, as well as that of the Nazi-Fascist variety. Perhaps you do not? Then at least honestly face the fact and say that whichever way the war in Spain goes it will make the New World's "immunity from totalitarian doctrines less secure."

Behind The Insurgents

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The reason the majority of the American people favor the Spanish loyalists is because they realize that behind the insurgents are Hitler and Mussolini, both dangerous to the United States and to South America.

One recent writer to The Post went so far as to hold that the insurgents represent the Spanish people, when anyone able to read dispatches knows that the rebellion was started by a few army officers under the influence of Mussolini and Hitler. The great mass of Spaniards want the loyalist government, and they would have won the war long ago if the dictators had not stepped in.

Also, we have the paradoxical situation of some prelates advocating the cause of the dictators who have fought their church and who are determined to exterminate it as far as they can. This is to say nothing of the Moslems being used by the insurgents to fight Christians. PHILIP J. VAN VLECK.

Landover, Md., Jan. 16.

No Such Assumption

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Post is worried for fear that if the loyalists lose it will bring fascism nearer to the New World and make its immunity from totalitarian doctrines less secure. It is assumed that if communistic doctrines were brought to the New World it would be satisfactory. Totalitarian doctrines and states are not unknown in the New World and a few such states are in existence at the present time. So far, this country has not attempted to intervene in the affairs of these totalitarian states.

In Justin McCarthy's "History of Our Own Times" (Vol. 2, page 132) we read that on May 13, 1861, the British government issued a neutrality proclamation warning all British subjects from supplying munitions of war to either belligerent. Any dictionary tells us that it is a departure from neutrality to furnish either of the contending parties with arms and munitions of war. Neutrality is not readiness to equip both sides; it is a fixed policy to equip neither side. Even a munition maker could not twist it to the reversed meaning.

The Southern Problem

"It has taken the South an unconscionably long time . . ."

SOME DAY a scholar will trace the history of the Southern problem. He will discover that there began to be a Southern problem about the time the "North" became heavily industrialized and disproportionately wealthy—that is to say, when the "North" (a) became obviously different from the "South" and (b) got in a position to shake its finger at those who were not like the "North." The scholar will then realize, if he is human, that the treatment of the problem has been exclusively moral.

This treatment has been so vociferous that it usually is mistaken for the problem itself. The year 1865, though tragically far beyond the beginning of the problem, was revealing. It was then that Thaddeus Stevens screamed he would dispossess the rebels of "every foot of ground they pretend to own." His purpose? ". . . to revolutionize the principles and feelings of these people . . . to drive forward a sluggish people." Those words, from the mouth of the bitterest fanatic in the Nation's history, epitomize the generally accepted moral reason for the Civil War.

Time has diminished the ambition of those who would reform the "South," but has not altered their attitude. Half a century after Stevens lost what he called a "square fight" with death, I was old enough to read the American Mercury. The article, I believe, dealt with racial problems, but I have forgotten its import. I was 20 and could not take it all in. Yet this much I could understand and remember forever—the phrase reprinted at the beginning of this essay:

"It has taken the South an unconscionably long time . . ."

The people of the Southeastern United States have recognized this attitude and their reaction has been like mine. And to their anger may be added a justifiable suspicion, for the reformers do not approach with clean hands and a clear purpose. Their nobility is complicated by a desire to prove a moral theory, to gain prestige by repairing an actual or supposed inadequacy of justice, or to convince one element or another that its wrongs can be mended only through a certain ideology.

Aside from the general suspicion and reluctance, the local politics of the "South" are the factor most militant against reform. The local machines were formed under the same dire necessity which gave rise to the original Ku Klux Klan. Ever since Thad Stevens swore he would dispossess the 70,000 at which he estimated the ruling population of the "South," there has been a constant campaign to deprive the upper and middle classes of their voice in local and national affairs. Combating this attempt has kept the county bosses in power.

The operation of local politics and mixed outside interests to produce negative results was demonstrated ludicrously last November. When the Southern Conference for Human Welfare met in Birmingham it was composed of moral zealots, Northern politicians, purposeful scholars, wide-eyed school teachers and borers from within. The city machine got to work on it. An ordinance was invoked against the meeting of white and colored people in the same public building.

The conference could have continued to meet and transact its business. A building was found where all the delegates could be accommodated, the only stipulation being that white and colored be segregated within the hall. The damage was done, however. Over the protests of colored delegates, who seem to have been the most realistic persons present, the zealots and the trouble-stirrers pushed through a resolution never again to meet in a city which would not allow white and colored to sit together. Thereupon they adjourned the conference without any action upon the blight of tenancy, starvation incomes, the lack of capital, the rot of slums, or the discriminatory freight rates. Another opportunity, and a promising one, had been destroyed by mutual ill-will.

President Roosevelt, the most astute politician to sit in the White House in our time, apparently has seen—late in his tenure—that the Southern problem must be put on a factual basis. His exposition of the "South" as "the Nation's No. 1 economic problem" notably avoids issues which might offend the objects of the new crusade.

If the President has sincere intentions to better the economic condition of the Southeastern United States, his analysis might well be a good beginning. Yet there is a terrible backlog of mistrust to overcome. Even the scholarly editorialist of the Richmond News-Leader could not resist a slap at any group which sits in the Nation's Capital to prescribe for the naughty "South." Said he:

"The South . . . cannot wage a successful war on its economic ills by adhering to a broad, vague plan that has been drafted by a few so-called 'experts' in Washington."

And when all is said and done, is there a Southern problem beyond the moral one? Certain troubles, it is true, are shared by a great region covering the Southeast. The North Carolina mountaineer, the Georgia planter and the Arkansas tenant all suffer because their land is poor, because there is no capital to finance better operations for them and no industry to absorb their products at high prices. Nevertheless they remain a North Carolina mountaineer, a Georgia planter and an Arkansas tenant—with different aspirations, different methods of thinking, even different ways of speech. Whether or not it is according to the economists' textbooks, there surely is the human and practical truth in the Richmond editor's statement:

"No campaign on the entire Southern front can have hope of success. There must be 1,000 campaigns. . . ." TURNER ROSE.

A Striking Parallel

THE CAMPAIGN of Mr. Roosevelt, Thurman Arnold and Harold Ickes against the newspapers closely follows the method of Hitler's preparatory work against Czecho-Slovakia and Mussolini's build-up of his case against Abyssinia. The axis dictators started at a murmur and worked up to a wild howl of outrage. The New Deal, after a long session of needling, is now beginning to reveal a serious intention to muzzle or starve the American kind of journalism, which is generally admitted to be the best journalism in the world.

Meanwhile the New Deal has been building up its own type of press. Herbert Hoover has accused the Administration of employing a thousand paid publicity agents daily and hourly to praise, color and sell its official acts and "pollute thought with the drugs of propaganda."

In moving for the abolition of the so-called National Emergency Council, Representative Bruce Barton charged that the council was only a front for a band of 290 press agents "engaged in disseminating publicity for the New Deal."

"THE COUNCIL maintains a field staff in the various States supposedly for the purpose of coordinating Federal emergency activities," he said. "But in reality this staff constitutes a corps of publicity agents for the Democratic Party."

Both Hoover and Barton are experts on publicity and propaganda, but they are prejudiced and therefore may exaggerate. However, it is well known that this Administration has hired more newspapermen as propagandists than any other, with the possible exception of Wilson's temporary wartime machine, and it should be remembered that Mussolini, as one of his earliest appeals for willing praise, bribed all the journalists of Italy to go along with him by creating a system of job protection and other benefits in the privately owned press. He didn't have to take his press agents into the government: The government, which was Mussolini's forced the press which became a government agency, to grant them conditions which a free press could not maintain.

MR. ARNOLD has made a pass at the advertising revenues of the papers in a statement arguing that advertising fosters unjust monopoly by enabling the advertisers to sell more goods than a nonadvertiser to the detriment of the latter. Thus in a move ostensibly intended to protect the nonadvertiser the newspapers would be deprived of the income by which they live and the field would be cleared for some new kind of journalism.

Possibly the new kind would be the European type which prints only propaganda and picks up its money from political parties, munitions makers and foreign interests. It might be a government press. The range for conjecture is wide, the only certainty being that the American type of press, with its fine virtues and its acknowledged but not capital faults, would be put to death as a penalty for opposing the New Deal.

ICKES ARGUES along the same lines in holding that because papers to live by the money received from the advertising trade they must favor the interests of advertisers and betray the interests of the public. He refuses to admit that it is possible for a paper and an advertiser to make an even trade of space for an agreed amount of money without any hidden and dishonest obligation on the part of the papers to perform implied but unstated favors for the customer.

None of them has yet openly admitted an intention to kill off the existing type of American newspaper, but the objective reveals itself in their remarks, for if Arnold and Ickes had their way the papers simply could not live. The President has been less bold, leaving the heavy duty to his two Henleins, after the manner of Hitler in Czecho-Slovakia. They have been turning on the heat with occasional remarks from him, and they have now reached the stage of arguing, per Ickes, that the press should be, but isn't, a servant of a free democracy.

IF THAT IS WHAT it should be, but isn't, then possibly the New Deal will feel a duty to make it so. The method is first to convict it by propaganda, then to kill it by laws curtailing the advertising and consequent starvation and, finally, to compel the new American press to serve free democracy.

Mr. Ickes obviously feels qualified to decide just what constitues service and what is disservice to free democracy and in the final development of the plan might be induced to serve as national editor, perhaps from a quiet sanctum in the Washington Naval Hospital, where board, room and medical service may be had by political guests of free democracy at the nominal fee of $3.75 a day.

Cotton Senators Continue Study

With reports by the Government and private groups before them, Senators from the Southern States this morning will continue their conference on the cotton question.

Senator Ellison D. Smith (Democrat), of South Carolina, chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, announced he will hold his proposed farm bill until the conferences are ended in order that agreements of the members can be included in it.

The Sharecroppers

By Ernest K. Lindley

Congestion In The South

THE 350 EVICTED sharecroppers and their wives and children who encamped on a highway in southeastern Missouri last week dramatized a situation which is worrying responsible officials of the Federal Government more than most of them admit publicly.

These sharecroppers blamed their plight on the desire of landowners to pocket AAA benefit checks. Landowners are required by law to share the benefit payments with tenants and sharecroppers. They do not have to share the benefit payments with workers they employ by the day.

The facts concerning the southeastern Missouri evictions have not been fully verified. Behind that particular demonstration there may have been a bit of promotion by the militant Southern Tenant Farmers Union. But it called the attention of the Nation to a problem which has been growing more acute—and which would remain unsolved if every landlord were a saint.

IT'S AN OLD problem, in some respects, going back as far as cotton culture in the United States goes. Cotton always has been a badge of poverty for many of the people who produce it. In the most prosperous years a big percentage of the cotton-producing population has never enjoyed a decent minimum standard of living. But during the last eight years, several things have happened to make the situation worse.

First, there has been a decline over a quarter of century at least in the amount of labor needed to produce a bale of cotton. This has been due to a variety of causes, but the most important seems to have been a shift in production from the Southeast to the Mississippi Delta lands and the Southwest, where more machinery can be used. Twenty-five years ago it took 271 hours of labor, on the average, to produce a bale of cotton. During 1933-36, it took only 218 hours, a reduction of about 19 per cent. These were the findings of an inquiry into cotton production, published last year by WPA.

This saving in labor would be all to the good if the people thrown out of work by it were finding other jobs. During the 20s many of them did. There was a steady migration from the cotton belt as well as from other rural areas into the industrial centers. The stream of migration was fed not only by the people thrown out of work by more efficient cotton production but by the high birthrate in the rural areas.

WITH THE ARRIVAL of the depression, the migration stopped, and soon it began to move the other way—as unemployed city workers trekked back to the farms. As late as 1935, the agricultural census reported that 2,000,000 people who had gone back to the farms were still there. In addition several hundred thousand young people—perhaps a million—who ordinarily would have gone to the cities were backed up on the farms. A great part of this surplus farm population was in the South. And there, to make matters even worse, cotton production has been reduced.

The AAA has made some effort to safeguard the interests of tenant farmers and sharecroppers. Possibly it has not made enough effort. Possibly some landowners have taken unfair advantage of their sharecroppers. But a great many sharecroppers move from place to place, anyway, so that no one in particular has a moral responsibility for seeing that they are cared for.

IN THE STRUGGLE to make a profit, the landowner is under constant pressure to reduce his costs. He may do it by using more machinery and by substituting day labor for the sharecropping system. If he were an industrialist he would be praised for lowering his costs—provided, of course, he paid a decent wage to his day laborers. But with all the benevolence in the world he cannot be expected to provide the means of sustenance for the great and still growing surplus population in the rural South.

When WPA launched a seasonal work program in the rural South last summer, it was swamped with applicants. State public welfare officials in the South estimated that some 1,700,000 workers had an income low enough—less than $300 cash per year—to meet the WPA requirements. WPA took on 166,000 of these in 11 Southern States.

WPA work, of course, is no solution for the problems of the South. But it is of some help. If the money were made available, it could be spent profitably, without question. And more money will be needed, in all probability, if a bad condition is not to be allowed to get worse.

Arabia Felix

BACK OF THAT SOUTH coast of Arabia which faces the Indian Ocean lies the little-known land called the Hadhramaut, once a center of rich spice trade, but for centuries lost in the desert. Of that country Miss Freya Stark wrote, three years ago, in "Southern Gates of Arabia," one of the finest travel books of the last decade. Of it she writes again, all too sparingly, in "Seen in the Hadhramaut" (Dutton, $5), which is primarily a picture book.

Herein one sees again the fading harmony of a world little changed since Julius Caesar's day. When the Roman legions were cutting roads through the forests and swamps of untamed England, the trade routes of Arabia were already old; and in inland cities the Arabians were already building their many-storied mansions, so startlingly like our own skyscrapers, crowning them with ibex horns and painting them so that they might gleam in the morning sun. Through all the dramatic centuries of the rise and fall of the Roman, the Byzantine, the Germanic and the British empires, those inland cities have continued their remote invisible life, changing far less than "unchanging China."

Three parties of white travelers visited them in the nineteenth century, two more before the World War. Freya Stark was one of the most observant of post-war, preaviation visitors. Today the Royal Air Force maintains a landing field in the territory, a British resident adviser has his headquarters there, a passable motor road links the once inaccessible cities to the coast, and the unchanging is changing. The Arab boys play football beneath the ancient walls of Shibam.

THIS ARAB civilization was never great. If it had any literature other than the records of tribal wars, it has perished; its pottery is unimaginative. The hardships of living in Arabia, even when the spice routes brought what today seems wealth, must have been too severe for the flowering of luxuries and graces. And yet out of the darkness of the Arabian past something has survived the centuries in strange perfection: "An architecture as lovely, as austere, and delicate as ever found expression in the dwelling houses of men."

This, too, is doomed. One ugly photograph reports the bastard Occidentalism of a sultan's "modern" palace. Miss Stark observes that the hand-made wooden ladles which once dipped water from the desert wells are giving way to more efficient California peach cans. How much of the dignity of the old civilization she learned to love may be preserved she does not know. Much, she suggests, if the British government officials are wise and strong; she offers as appealing a defense of British imperial methods, including policing by airplane bombers, as I have yet met.

It is not the government officials, she says, who are responsible for the catastrophe of moral values which is so obvious in other Arab lands. They know and love their people, and do what they can to protect them from themselves and to temper as far as possible the inevitable change. The menace comes from "the Western expert."

"Whether it be oil or gold, science or excavation, his loyalty is naturally bound, not to the country he visits, but to whatever it is that has sent him from outside. He comes indeed for what he can take away. Nor does he usually know the harm he does. He follows his own business, and by his mere existence corrupts the minds of men—for he makes them dissatisfied with what they have and are, and does not trouble to guide them in safety through the labyrinth of what they would become. He considers it sufficient that he pays. He is like one who, using prussic acid himself for innocuous purposes, leaves the bottle lying promiscuously about among the ignorant . . . Nor is there any remedy except a deep conviction among all who go to these lands, that their first duty, before that owed to their companies, their sciences, their own governments, or their own vanities, is a duty to the lives of the people around them to whom they can do such immense and unwitting harm."

That is a pregnant paragraph, with as much meaning for archeologists and oil men in the Americas as in the East.

MISS STARK, like the British resident adviser in the Hadhramaut, adopted Arabian dress and adapted herself to Arabian customs while living in the Hadhramaut. She did indeed, as an article from the London Geographic Review (quoted in the current Living Age) reveals, unwittingly start a new fashion in her adopted village. She dressed as Arab woman, except that she omitted the spangles, sequins, gold threads and cowrie shells fancied by the Arab women. The religious head of the little town admired the simplicity of her dress and ordered all the tinsel cut from the dresses of the native women. Despair and the sound of snipping shears filled every harem in Huraidha, and Miss Shark hurried to the chief to protest. To no avail; the men, in unanimous chorus, assured her that they had always known the spangles to be expensive, and now she had proved them unnecessary.

There is little of Miss Stark herself—except of her modest intelligence—in this satisfying but too brief book. Once she mentions that she herself found the only pre-Islamic drawings of cattle found in the region, and that they suggest that Arabia, not Africa, was the Bibical "land of Punt." More of herself she does not vouchsafe.

On The Record

By Dorothy Thompson

The Social Security Board's Report

THE REPORT of the Social Security Board, which was presented to Congress on Monday, embodies many of the recommendations that have been made by experts and by critics of the existing social security laws since they were passed.

Probably the most important item in the report is one which is only a suggestion, since the board recognizes the responsibility of the Treasury Department in that connection. That is the manner of financing.

The board suggests that part of the cost of the insurances should be borne by other than pay-roll taxes.

THE MOST successful insurance system that has operated for a large number of wage earners over a long period of time is the British. If, framing our insurance legislation, we had taken our cue from the British we would have made a much more reasonable system. Instead, ours resembles somewhat in its financial features the German system, first instituted by Bismarck in the 80s; And although that was a good system for its day, it was broken down lamentably later.

The German system, which was designed in the earlier days of industry when unemployment was not a chronic and periodic disease of the social order, was financed on the basis of pay-roll taxes, and was, like ours, primarily a system of enforced thrift.

After the war, however, when there were prolonged periods of very high unemployment, the system broke down.

Since, like ours, it had to be carried by employed workers, their taxes rose to 10 per cent of their wages, and even then the revenues were wholly inadequate to carry the necessary benefits to the unemployed.

The British system of old-age pensions and unemployment insurance benefits has an entirely different social philosophy behind it, and a much more liberal and realistic one.

The British frankly regard old-age pensions and the other social insurances as a means of distributing a part of the national profits annually to those who need them most.

Instead of financing the insurance out of pay-roll taxes and making the whole system into one of compulsory thrift, the British government distributes the burden over the entire economic order, admitting that its object is to prevent purchasing power from ever slumping below a certain level.

THE POINT is that the British system has worked. The constant maintenance of internal purchasing power above a certain level has prevented any such collapse in the domestic market as we have suffered here.

And although for psychological reasons it is well for the worker to make some contribution to the provisions for his unemployment and old age, the financing of the social insurances chiefly by means of pay-roll taxes should certainly be considered from the viewpoint of its effect on technological unemployment.

These pay-roll taxes penalize the employment of men in competition with the employment of machines, when precisely the opposite is needed.

THIS WOULD BE entirely mitigated by financing the insurances out of income taxes and greatly broadening the base and lowering the point at which income tax is obtained.

Such a means would also enormously simplify the bookkeeping and administration, which is now, in any case, quite unnecessarily complicated.

The system of setting up contributions and benefit rates on the basis of a percentage of wages earned makes a separate wage class of every wage earner and involves for the employer the most complicated administration imaginable and the waste of an enormous amount of costly time.

An attempt should really be made to find out what it costs the country to make out the forms it requires from every company. The paper-work overhead could be reduced to a minimum by using a few categories of flat rates and the stamp system, as they do in England.

THE BOARD'S recommendations that old-age unemployment insurance be extended to increased categories of workers is obviously sound, as is the recommendation that the widows of workers qualifying for old-age insurance should be entitled to their husbands' benefits.

It also is a reasonable recommendation that unemployment compensation taxes and old-age insurance taxes should be combined to facilitate the bookkeeping of employers, although the whole thing should be radically simplified.

Certainly, as the board recommends, the entire administration should be taken out of politics forever and put under civil service, and certainly, as the board recommends, the administration of unemployment compensation should be united with the United States Employment Service.

In England, where they have no WPA the unemployed seeking unemployment benefits MUST register and report for work regularly at the public employment office. If a job at normal wages is available within his own occupation the worker must accept it or lose the benefit.

IF CONGRESS is going to reconsider the social security act, it should certainly reconsider the reserve-fund provisions.

Apparently the idea of a huge reserve fund is copied from private insurance companies, and is another example of confused thinking.

An attempt has been made to put our governmental insurance on an actuarial basis, but that cannot be done for a system whose goal is not financial, but social. A huge reserve is basically unnecessary in a Government plant; the presence of a huge capital sum will only constitute a temptation to Congress and the people to spend it, and what the effect of its investment might be is very dubious.

CERTAINLY ALSO something should be done to bring about greater uniformity in the benefit systems as between the States. If we do not do so we shall eventually upset the population distribution, because people will gravitate to those parts of the country where the benefits are higher. The Federal Government can bring about adjustment by the way it handles grants-in-aid. It ought to give no grants at all unless the States are willing to conform to a somewhat reasonable standard, and it certainly ought to assist the poorer States. After all, something like 50 per cent of the industrial production of this country comes from 26 counties of the Nation. We need a better geographic distribution of wealth, and this would be a reasonable way for the Government to assist that process.

The Spanish Issue Debated

Likes Fernsworth's Article

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have just read in The Post of January 14 Lawrence Fernsworth's carefully worded and factual article on the situation in loyalist and insurgent Spain. It is refreshing to find The Post printing, as it has so frequently done, dispassionate material on the Spanish situation at a time when the voice of propaganda is seeking so assiduously to mislead the American people.

EDWIN S. SMITH.
Washington, Jan. 14.

The Fiction Of Neutrality

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Much has been said pro and con about American neutrality as related to the Spanish embargo. I believe in real neutrality, but not in neutrality which is a mere legal fiction.

A real neutrality places an embargo not merely upon the belligerent powers, whether it is a war between two foreign states or a civil war, but upon the powers which are aiding and abetting such a war.

It is a well-known fact that certain powers have been aiding and abetting the war in Spain. Under such conditions an act of neutrality invoking an embargo against the two belligerents in Spain, and not against the foreign powers which aid and support the war in Spain, makes our neutrality a mere legal fiction.

By selling and shipping ammunition and fighting machines to the foreign powers to be immediately resold and reshipped to one or the other of the belligerent powers in Spain, we make a farce out of our embargo against Spain. In that way we are giving indirect aid and support to these belligerent powers in Spain, and, as it happens in the present case, we are thus giving aid to only one of the belligerent powers, and are materially aiding in defending the other belligerent power.

If we are going to be neutral in theory, let us see to it that we are in practice. Let us not create a legal fiction of neutrality, while in actual practice we give substantial aid to one belligerent power in Spain while we are withholding similar aid from the other belligerent. Everyone knows who knows anything, that when we sell and ship war materials to Italy, that we might as well sell and ship it to Franco's army directly. Such a neutrality defeats the very objective of our American policy of neutrality. REV. C. S. LONGACRE.
Takoma Park, Md., Jan. 16.

Propaganda Bombardment

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If, under the bombardment of propaganda we are now going through, there are any people left who can think calmly on the Spanish situation, the following observations should be self-evident:

1. The Spanish people have the right to establish the form of government which they think best for their welfare. We Americans fought the Revolution on this principle.

2. If the Spanish people differ among themselves as to the kind of government they should have, even to the extent of waging war over the issue, that is also their privilege. They also have the right to settle the issue free from outside interference. We Americans proclaimed that in the Civil War and in the dispute with Great Britain over her aid to the Confederacy.

If those two principles are admitted, the neutrality policy of the United States in the Spanish civil war becomes clear and absolutely justifiable. If that is so, then any deviation from that policy is an unwarranted intervention which the United States has just abjured at Lima.

It is beside the point to argue that other countries are intervening in Spain and that the United States should, therefore, intervene by lifting the arms embargo in favor of the Barcelona government. The fact is that the situation in Spain is so complicated by the interference of all the principal powers of Europe that it amounts to a European war, in which the best interests and the traditional policy of the United States dictate a strict neutrality on its part.

The same conditions which gave rise to the first American declaration of neutrality toward Europe still obtain today. The United States owes its present existence and happy conditions of life for its citizens to the fact that it has refrained to its utmost ability from becoming entangled in the dissensions continually arising in Europe. More than that, it will have no meddling by the European powers in the affairs of the Western Hemisphere. We see today in Europe's sufferings what we ourselves would be suffering but for the happy circumstances of the Atlantic and Pacific oceans and an ever-present desire for individual freedom and happiness.

The attempts today to transplant to this continent the elements of hatred and oppression which are always present in Europe constitute the greatest piece of brazen impudence which has been perpetrated since the days of the World War. when certain foreign diplomats were handed their passports by this Government, due to their unwelcome activities in the United States. Propaganda designed to arouse in this country the dissension and intolerance which ravage Europe, is flooding the country and taking effect. The methods of its dissemination are an insult to the people and the Government of the United States. ELEANOR H. FINCH.

Franco And Fascism

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It was with a strong sense of the sardonic that I read the accounts in The Post of the mass meeting at Constitution Hall of those "stout enemies of persecution," the Keep the Embargo Committee. Particularly interesting was the paragraph which stated that, in spite of the speakers' statements that this group was interested only in "neutrality" and supported no sides, the audience cheered wildly whenever Franco's name was mentioned.

The truth will out. Supporters of the movement to lift the embargo, because they are supporters of democracy, justice and decency, can come out openly and state their case knowing that it is one in which the majority of Americans firmly believe. But supporters of fascism must hide behind the mask of high-sounding words such as "neutrality" and, failing logical support for their arguments, call on primitive passions through the recital of atrocity stories.

No one realizes better than I the uselessness of any attempt to change the minds of such people. But I would like to appeal to those Americans who have remained apathetic to the Spanish struggle because they thought it was not important to do a little independent fact finding about it. I am sure they would join then with those of us who feel that fascism is a loathsome thing and who look with suspicion on those who decry it in Germany with one breath and support it in Spain with the next.

That is the stark issue that cannot be evaded—it is fascism they are fighting in Spain and those who support Franco support fascism.

Keep The Embargo

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I noted in your editorial (Sunday the 15th), "If Franco Wins," that you have come from behind the hedge. Although you did some more hedging, you made yourself very clear that the policy of The Post is to lift the embargo.

Now don't be frightened, we are no worse off than when the loyalists (to Russia) were winning. I still say the U. S. A. should not take sides. The loyalists are getting aid from Russia, Mexico, France and other communistically controlled or influenced countries. Why do we have to help them out? The communists are just as much a menace politically, economically, yes, and religiously. True, they are very definitely "powers of darkness," as you put it in your editorial. So are many of the totalitarian policies, I grant.

However, it is an ascertained fact that the loyalists are as much a "bogey" as the nationalists to a great number of clear-thinking, impartial Americans. In fact a more vital one.

According to you, George Washington was wrong in stating that we must "avoid foreign entanglements." Lest you have forgotten, we were drawn into the World War by taking sides. Our dealing with China at the expense of Japan is dangerous enough without our doubling this mistake. Let's be 100 per cent Americans. Let's be honest. Let's keep the embargo! A CHRISTIAN.
Washington, Jan. 16.

Comparative Aggression

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Perhaps your correspondent who signs himself "A Christian" would have his inquiries answered if he read the American newspapers more carefully. He would learn that Hitler and Mussolini are aggressive, constantly encroaching upon their neighbors, and that their interest in Spain is to gain a position which will permit them to stab France and England in the back, and to have a springboard for fascist penetration of the New World via South America. Stalin, in recent years at least, has demonstrated no comparably aggressive tendencies.

Nor is the assistance the loyalists in Spain have received from Russia, France, etc., at all comparable with the open intervention, in great force of the Italians and Germans.

As for murders and outrages, reliable news daily records the bombing of babies and women in open towns by fascist planes. Franco's Moors have murdered more than their share, too, if that is what worries "A Christian."

Better not let either the red, brown, or black skunk get the chicken, "Christian." Let republican Spain govern its own roost.

R. H. THRONE.
Baltimore, Md., Jan. 16.

Cancer Of Communism

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have just read the six letters in your column of January 13. Due to the fact that you and your controlled press favor the lifting of the embargo on arms to Spain it seems logical to me that these letters were carefully chosen by you or your puppet assistants.

I firmly believe that the authors of these letters are sincere in their belief. Evidently they read nothing except your controlled press.

If you were real Americans (you press people) you would expose these un-American subversive powers behind the scenes of your Government. If you were American you would get behind the Dies committee. You would tell the public of the 20,000,000 people who were brutally killed in Russia because they were servants of Christ "Our Lord, Our King" upon whose principles and ideals our great country was founded.

Why don't you tell them about the international banker and the warmonger (really the only ones interested in the embargo) who are causing depression, "class and race hatred" and all the unrest in the world today. Why don't you tell them that if it weren't for this "cancer" called communism there would be no civil war in Spain? Neither would there be any such thing as nazism or fascism in the world.

Create a lot more interest in our Christian American Government and less interest in Europe and you'll probably convince us that you are real Americans.

ALBERT VON COURT.
Washington, Jan. 13.

"Suffer Little Children"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The confused thought as expressed in your editorial of January 11, "Suffer Little Children" is astounding. While all right-minded, humanitarian persons want to alleviate the suffering of all attacked by the Nazis and especially the children, your appeal for help to the German refugee children would be more effective if made as such. While appealing to your readers for sympathy for the German children, you slip in phrases which seem to oppose lifting the embargo against loyalist Spain.

How can you ask for our citizens of this democracy to aid the persecuted of nazism, with one hand, and with the other strengthen it by opposing the means whereby the duly elected government of Spain may defeat the fascist aggressors invading its country. All lovers of democracy must unite in demanding that the embargo be lifted. Loyalist Spain must be helped to defeat the onslaught of fascism.

Making Up Those Nights of Study Missed

This is the time of year when university and high school students buckle down to work with a vengeance because it is examination time again. The goal of the new uniform is to enable soldiers to perform wartime duties without discomfort due to the nature of their clothing and at same time retain a suitable uniform for garrison wear. This front view of uniforms shows (from left) old-style dress, old-style field, new style dress, and new-style field. Differences . . .

The color was chosen because of its excellent camouflage properties said to blend into the background more efficiently than khaki. Fabric for the new uniforms can be produced in quantities easier than khaki, which didn't always match in color.

Daily Exercise Counts Most In Reducing

Calorie Discrimination Only Needed Factor to Bring Weight Down

By Ida Jean Kain.

WOMEN WHO don't have enough money are apt to get into a rut about their looks. In the struggle to make ends meet, it may seem as if having money would solve everything—even to giving them lovely figures and clear skins!

There is no denying that money helps, but it won't do everything. Its limitations were brought home to me very graphically at a recent fashion clinic held at one of the Fifth avenue stores, with heads of the various departments telling how women could improve their looks with a new hair-do, a better fitting corset, a more becoming style of dress, etc.

These women were all authorities in their own fields and good advertisements for their departments, but the hair stylist had a double chin, the expert on cosmetics for types was considerably overweight and the corsetiere's figure showed no restrain—because even the most expensive corset couldn't give her a waistline.

Results of Soft Living

Now, surely these high powered executives have enough money to keep up their looks! But they were not goodlooking, because they haven't the time!

And in the audience of this same clinic were a number of society women who, presumably, have both time and money, but who evidently lacked determination, for most of them conformed to the picture of the typical dowager.

If you really want to spruce up your looks, you won't let anything stand in your way. And as you go along you will find that what counts most is a lot of determination and a little bit of time every day spent in doing your exercises. You will be amazed at the difference just 15 minutes of daily exercise can make in your figure, your skin and your spirits, too, because a good figure and skin help you to wear the most inexpensive frock with dash.

It doesn't take long to get your weight down, either. A little calorie discrimination is all that's needed. Some of you have written that you can't go on my diets because they are too expensive, that you have to use the leftovers. Those leftovers have been puzzling me for years! Shall I put them in the menus? Or would you object that you had that yesterday? Besides, some days there aren't any leftovers, then what? So I leave them out, but you are free to use all the leftover vegetables and meats—but no leftover pie or cake!

Cut Out Desserts

When we come right down to it, here's all that dieting need amount to for any of you: Cut desserts entirely out of the menu and put a strict limit on sugar, salt and liquid with the meals. Never have more than one cup of any kind of liquid at mealtime. Restrict the bread to three slices per day, butter to three pats—each pat 1¼ inches by 1¼ inches by ¼ inch.

Then be sure to include in the menu for the day lean meat, cooked and raw vegetables, skim milk and one egg. The menus can be as inexpensive as you please. You will find that you reduce just as fast on ground round steak as on sirloin—and cabbage is lower in calories than artichokes.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Bachelor of 40 Echoes Wistful Query of Youth of 21: Where to Find, How to Know, "The Right Mate?"

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I was much interested in the question raised in your column of January 7 by the "male past 21," as to whether man is ever fortunate enough to find the perfect wife, or whether compromise is unavoidable. Your answer, entitled "Pursuit of Visions," indicates that you believe in no such thing as the Ideal Woman but that, given time, the "divine afflatus" will inevitably overtake one. That may sound hopeful for the male just past 21, but what about the despairing bachelor who has reached 40 without ever coming within hailing distance of a suitable—not necessarily ideal—life partner?

My problem is the same as if I were still 21. One woman is attractive, physically, but mentally a dud; another is easy to get on with, but has an entirely different social background; still another is intelligent but lacks spiritual character; and so it goes. The trouble is, I can find something of interest in all women, but never enough in one woman to push me over the brink of matrimony.

Must I be classed with the psychopaths, the "emotionally blocked," the egocentrics, for this discouraging failure to find the right mate? Or should I abandon what appears to be a futile search, and compromise on just any woman at all? Unfortunately, I seem to cling to the theory that it is possible to combine biological attraction with those mental, moral and emotional qualities which in themselves strike a response in the opposite sex; and to find these qualities combined in a person who belongs to one's own strata in society. Perfection may never be fully realized, but surely there is a complement somewhere for all human natures—if only there existed a clearing house of human relations.

I notice your column frequently refers to the hordes of attractive women in Washington—single, widowed and divorced, fiercely competing for the favor of the "eligible" males. Perhaps it's a case of "the more you see of others the less you will settle to one," but this is the third tour of Government duty I have commenced in this city without once discerning anyone on the horizon to whose charms I might willingly succumb. If there is no such thing as a Perfect Woman, please tell me how I can recognize the girl who might prove to be the right mate. Or should I compromise now on a marriage partner with whom I am not in love? Incidentally, I have a sense of humor, do not wish to marry for money, and am fond of dogs and children. What do you suppose is wrong—as my best friend seems unable to tell me. Sincerely yours. PUZZLED.

Facing the Facts

DEAR PUZZLED: Persons in your predicament may as well face the fact, I suppose, that the incidence of—and/or capacity for—falling ardently in love depend far more upon the individual's own emotional mechanism than upon the qualities of the person addressed. An analogous truism—which may perhaps clarify the statement—is the old familiar saying to the effect that "beauty lies in the eyes of the beholder." As Emerson has said: "Though we travel the world over to find the beautiful, we must carry it with us, or we find it not." And as Bovee has said: "The beauty seen is partly in him who sees it."

Thus, the man or woman who has never encountered a person of the opposite sex in whom he (or she) could discern a wealth, not to mention a competence, of irresistibly stimulating, complementary natural qualities, such as would lead to that feeling of mutual rappart which the world calls love—that deprived individual may well hold his own poverty-stricken personality to blame. Figuratively speaking, he is somewhat a blind man holding out a shallow cup to the ocean of life.

Persons of deep human sympathies, of great imaginative reach; persons of ardent, intuitive, idealistic and psychologically mature temperament, are as attuned to emotional responsiveness in varying degrees as a harp is attuned to the breath of the wind. Their difficulty is not in finding someone to love, someone who will evoke an answering concord of feeling; but rather the difficulty of feeling to keenly in too many directions, and, often, of imputing worth to unworthy persons.

However, to concentrate on your specific problem: I think that you have been handicapped in your search for the suitable mate as much by a lamentable heritage of snobbery as by your emotional limitations. You speak of clinging to "the theory that it is possible to combine biological attraction with those mental, moral and emotional qualities which in themselves strike a response," and of expecting to "find these qualities combined in a person who belongs to one's own strata of society." After which, almost in the same breath, you go on to express the belief that "surely there is a complement somewhere for all human nature—if only there existed a clearing house of human relations."

I find a misleading amount of illogical contradiction implicit in these conglomerate sentiments. It seems to me that only an insufferable snob would fail to recognize the fact that the person who is sufficiently his co-equal, "mentally, morally and emotionally," to "strike a responsive chord," and who, in addition, is endowed with that physical personability which constitutes "biological attraction," is indisputably his social equal—if democracy means anything—and belongs intrinsically to the same "strata of society," even though circumstances may have denied him the worldly passport of similar background.

Yet it seems that you are failing to make that concession, and thereby shutting yourself off from the good offices of even the most inspired "clearing house of human relations," supposing any such existed. As you say, it is reasonable to suppose that "there is a complement somewhere for all human natures," but how under the sun do you expect to find that complement, in your case, if you are superciliously reluctant to venture outside the confines of a certain clique? If the persons with whom you are wont to associate are as frigidly limited, in temperament and social philosophy, as you give evidence of being, it is small wonder that you have never met, among their number, a woman capable of enticing you "over the brink of matrimony."

Now, having told you what, in my opinion, is "wrong" with your reaction to the fair sex, there remain the questions of, "How to recognize the girl who might prove to be the right mate?" and, "Should I compromise on a marriage partner with whom I am not in love?" To the latter question, I would return a prompt, "No," for the reason that you have little enough love to give as it is, without deliberately denying that little a challenging opportunity for progressive expression. And as for the other, you must know that it would be downright absurd of me to attempt to tell you what specific qualities to look for in a wife, since it is axiomatic that there is no accounting for tastes, and that what is one man's meat is another man's poison. However, one never strikes very wide of the mark in suggesting to a middle-aged, woman-wary bachelor that his mother and/or himself are the real loves of his life; and since it is obviously impossible for him to marry either the one or the other, probably the best he can do is to select a wife patterned after his mother. Victoria Still Rules Style World

Although Victoria Regina was lovingly known to her British Empire as "a very little Queen," her influence on present-day fashions is as dominant as ever. If a poll were taken to determine who was the chief influence in last year's fashion scene, neither Wallis Windsor nor Mrs. Harrison Williams would lead. Posthumous fashion laurels would go to Queen Victoria, and indirectly to Miss Helen Hayes, who has revived interest in the aptimacassar era, through her stage portrayal of "Victoria Regina." Sketched above are cold style steals from the mauve decade. Upper right—An impression of Miss Hayes shrouded in a many flounced ball gown. Beneath her watered moire band blazes the Knight of the Garter emblem. On her slick coiffure rests a ruby and diamond tiara. Modern jewelers have interpreted Victorian jewelry modes for modern beauties even down to brooches designed after the three plumes of the Duke of Wales. Upper right—A puff of amethyst moire, veiled and bowed, in quaint Victorian mood. The 1939 girl masking her beauty in her fresh violet muff might be an 1890 debutante, for even her cyclamen and vintage-toned cosmetics carry out a favorite Victorian color theme. Lower left is one of the most popular modern lounging robes, a quilted taffeta, introduced by Prince Albert, Victoria's consort. The little figure struggling with her hoops and camisole is as modern as the Duchess of Kent, but her lingerie preferences for lace and ribbon trimmings revert to the Victorian era. The little girl beneath the portrait of her style sovereign has borrowed many nineteenth century foibles. Her pinwheel of skunk is almost identical to the little housemaids' type of bonnets adored by Victoria.

The Melting Pot

"Well, I really believe we've got nearly every state represented here tonight. Where are you from, Mrs. Redwood?"

"California."

"O-O-H! California! Well, I suppose you see a lot of the movie stars—say, tell me, do you think Tyrone Power—"

"I am from Northern California."

"Oh, I see. Well, I think Los Angeles is a very interesting city—"

"I am from San Francisco. Pardon me, I believe I see my husband looking for me."

II.

"Mrs. Cypress, I want you to meet Mrs. Babb. Now Mrs. Cypress is from North Carolina—"

"SOUTH Carolina."

"Oh, I beg your pardon. I always get people from those two States mixed up so. I don't suppose there's any feeling—"

"Oh, well . . no . . of course, I suppose it's sort of foolish, but—well, a lot of the old South Carolinians feel that the North Carolinians are—well a little tacky.

"Now isn't that funny! Now take me, I don't have a bit of state feeling that way."

"Where are you from?"

"Minneapolis."

"Oh, yes. Now is that the same as Milwaukee?"

"Oh, NO! Minneapolis is in MINNESOTA."

"Oh, yes! Up there by St. Paul."

"NO!" St. Paul is up there by Minneapolis."

III.

"And just where are you from, Mrs. Muleteer?"

"Kansas City."

"Well, I think Kansas is a wonderful State—"

"Oh, but Kansas City is in MISSOURI!"

Oh, then you're from Missouri! Well, now I always thought Kansas City was in—oh, really I'd didn't mean any offense—"

IV.

"No, I have'nt met Mrs. Wheatley. Where are you from, Mrs. Wheatley?"

"Kansas."

"Oh! So you're from out in Kansas! Well, I was just talking to a woman from Missouri—"

"Well, I really don't know many people in Missouri."

"Yes, of course, they are different States."

"Yes, they are VERY different."

V

"Mrs. Gink, this is Mrs. Laurel from—is it South Carolina?"

"NORTH Carolina."

"Oh, yes, I should have known that. I'm so sorry."

"That's all right. I really don't mind. It's just that everybody keeps thinking I'm from South Carolina. I really havn't got any State pride myself—it's just that I was brought up to think that South Carolinians were—well just a little tacky."

VI

"Now Mrs. Ark, I know you're from either Virginia or Maryland—"

"I am from Baltimore."

"Well, I suppose it's all about the same thing—what I mean is all Southerners—"

"No indeed! You see Maryland was settled by an entirely different class from any of the other Southern States. Now you see in the early seventeenth century—"

"Yes, yes, I know. What I mean is there's really no State feeling—"

"Oh no. Marylanders don't pay any attention to things like that. You see toleration's one of the things Maryland's always stood for. The first settlers were of a very distinctive type. You see they were liberal minded aristocrats, hard riding, rich living, high spirited Bourbons; broad gauged, cultural minded scholars and gentlemen, noble born, worldly wise—"

"Oh yes, of course. Say pardon me, but I believe my husband is looking for me."

"Where are you from, Mrs. Pace?"

"Me? . . . Oh, New York."

"Well wouldn't you like to meet some of these ladies from other sections? Now this is Mrs. Wilder. She's from Oklahoma."

"Oh, really?"

"And this Mrs. Breeze. She's from Oklahoma."

"And this is Mrs. Magnolia. She's from Georgia."

"And this is Mrs. Mosey. Now Mrs. Mosey's from Washington."

Midseason Styles In Paris 'Say It With Flowers'

Paris (AP).—Midseason fashions—hinting at spring—"say it with flowers." White narcissus sets off black satin frocks. Parma violets grace purple-clad shoulders and swarm on toques. Red geraniums highlight gray crepe.

Jeweled flowers make crests for chic coiffures, while dahlias dangle from wrists in big bouquets. Pink roses, fronting new evening toques, repeat pink roses clustered thick on evening suit lapels.

In afternoon costume, advance spring styles decree bright flowers for black frocks. A black crepe frock with cross-over bodice has large pink roses at the waist. Another shows purple and yellow pansies bunched at the neck, and more pansies each side of the black straw hat. White pique flowers flourish in the morning, on black or navy wool frocks narrowly banded with pique.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Jan. 17.

BY THIS time I have become a professional cocktail party avoider. Rarely a day passes but two or three inspired manufacturers hurl afternoon orgies to introduce new brassieres, perfumes or potato mashers to the apathetic press, and I have become an artful dodger at missing as many of these as possible.

ALICE HUGHES

One such party, however, I always try to make, and that is the annual brawl tossed by the local movie critics to honor their selections of the best pictures and performances of the past year. This event came off not long ago at Mr. Rockefeller's saloon, the Rainbow Room, and as usual I got a happy kick out of meeting all my old friends of the movie press, and also the huge herd of actors who dominate these galas. This year we bumped shins with such people as Luise Rainer, Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Cagney and Claire Trevor, to mention but a handful. The venerable spouse, Mr. Hall, was difficult all afternoon, being in a purple rage of jealousy over the fact that his beloved Zorina was being squired by Doug Fairbanks, jr. "Must that guy have all the luck?" Hall would mutter. "He has been married to Joan Crawford, and has kept company with Marlene Dietrich, and has a beautiful little mustache. Why should he rate this wonder girl, too?" I just pushed the elderly crackpot under a table and went on smirking at the actors.

As always, it was a very jolly party, and the fact that I did not agree with the critics' picks for the season did not lessen my enjoyment. My own problem was the spouse, who followed Zorina and Fairbanks around with his dirtiest sneer. I did not tell him, but in my opinion only a Zorina could get away with a knot of varicolored ostrich plumes she called a hat. Even so I must rate old Mr. Hall good, for she is a gorgeous critter.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN: In a city of weird organizations, I pass the prize today to "The Friends of the Duke of Windsor in America." This group of Davy Diehards was organized on his birthday last June by Mrs. Lewis Stuyvesant Chanler, a lady whose family history here goes back almost to Dutch times. "Our group is just a handful, about 20 people. We formed this organization because we admire the Duke of Windsor. I think the most important thing in the world is justice, and the Duke of Windsor has been oppressed," says Mrs. Chanler. Passing over a chance for some high-class irony, I can only say that the whole world should be oppressed as cruelly as Davy. What a garden spot it would be!

Pretty Alice Marble, the yellow-haired champ from California, has scored a great hit singing at the Sert room of the Waldorf, and her engagement has been extended. It is good to know that when Alice tires of hitting the high ones with her magic raquet, she can still do all right hitting the low ones with her breadwinning larynx.

As usual, the Russians here have finally finished celebrating their Christmas and New Year—ten days after the rest of us have tossed the holly into the ashcan. This double set of feasts is very nice for New Yorkers who love as many holidays as possible, but most of us are well satisfied with one set, thank you very much.

Fashion Decrees Thousand Trends For Women in 1939

Hollywood, Calif.—Fashion historians will set down 1939 as the year of a thousand trends. Almost everything goes because the year's first rule is to accent individuality, according to Milo Anderson, Warner Bros.' designer. His list of Hollywood's best-dressed stars—and reasons—bears this out:

Fay Bainter—Because her clothes are exquisite, simple and befitting a mature woman.

Bette Davis—Perfect fashion sophisticate.

Cootes-Belin Nuptials at St. John's Church Outstanding Wedding of Capital Season

Many Out-of-Town Guests Attend; Bride, Internationally Known Tennis Star, Wears Grandmother's Gown

By Hope Ridings Miller
The Post Society Editor.

WEARING HER GREAT-GRANDMOTHER'S dress with its rippling flounces of Alencon lace, Miss Mary Elizabeth Dickson Cootes, daughter of Mrs. Harry Newton Cootes and the late Col. Cootes, yesterday afternoon became the bride of Peter Belin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lammot Belin.

St. John's Church was the scene of the 3 o'clock ceremony at which the Rev. Oliver J. Hart officiated. Calla lilies, white snapdragons and palms banked the altar as a setting for the event, which chalked up honors as the outstanding wedding of the season. Dr. Kurt Hetzel, who has played for many topflight nuptial ceremonies in Washington, was at the organ yesterday and gave a program of several selections before he began the wedding march.

Originally planned as a small affair, the event turned out to be a sizable one with a number of guests from out of town coming to the Capital especially to attend, and with many Washington and Virginia friends of the Belin and Cootes families also there.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Merritt Newton Cootes, who recently flew to the Capital from Port au Prince, Haiti, where he is United States Vice Consul and Third Secretary of the United States Legation. A stunning picture, the former Miss Cootes appeared in a gown that had been worn by two other brides in her family. It was fashioned with an Alencon lace skirt in two flounces over a hoop, and a fitted bodice with an off-the-shoulder bertha of Rose Point lace. An exquisite veil of heirloom lace, caught with orange blossoms and an old-fashioned bouquet of cream roses and lilies of the valley were further accents for her ensemble.

Mrs. John Meyer, of New York City, cousin of the bride, was her only attendant, wearing a frock of aquamarine crepe trimmed with gold beads and a small hat of petals to match. Her bouquet was of talisman roses and mignonette.

P. W. Green Is Best Man

P. William A. Green, of New York, was best man, and ushers included Cuthbert R. Train and Middleton G. C. Train, of Washington; August Heckscher 3d, and Richard King, of Cambridge, Mass.; James Higgins, of Pawtucket, R. I.; Chester B. Kerr and Whitelaw Reid, of New York; Charles Seymour, of New Haven, Conn.; Bayard Sharp, of Wilmington, Del., and Reverdy Wadsworth, of Geneseo, N. Y.

Following the wedding, there was a small reception at the Cootes home of the bride's mother, guests being limited to members of the immediate families and the wedding party. Later, the couple left on a wedding trip that will take them around the world.

For her traveling costume, the former Miss Cootes chose a gray suit trimmed with blue suede and a hat and accessories to match.

Out-of-town guests at the wedding included the United States Ambassador to the Argentines and Mrs. Alexander Weddell; Mr. and Mrs. Bradfish Johnston and Miss Adelaide Johnson of Paris, France; Mme. Jules Lechaux, of Le Havre, France, a sister of Mrs. Cootes; Mrs. Samuel Warren of Boston, and Mr. and Mrs. Allen W. Dulles and Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. Johnston of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Pierre du Pont of Delaware, and Mrs. G. d'Audelot Belin, of Waverly, Pa.

Bride Is Noted Tennis Player

Mrs. Belin attended Concord Academy in Massachusetts and was graduated from Smith College. She is a widely known tennis player, both here and abroad, and last year she competed at Wimbledon and at Forest Hills.

The bridegroom attended Le Rosey School in Switzerland and Hotchkiss School and was graduated from Yale in 1936. The following year he studied in Paris. Recently he has been private secretary to Ambassador Hugh R. Wilson in Berlin, and returned to this country with the Ambassador on November 25.

Mr. Belin's father entered diplomatic service in 1917 as private secretary of the Minister at Peking and later was First Secretary at London and then at Constantinople. In 1932 and 1933 he was United States Minister to Poland. Since then he and Mrs. Belin have spent much time at Evermay, their Georgetown estate.

Mrs. Leiter Fetes Wedding Party

As the last in a round of parties that have been given for the principals in the wedding, Mrs. Joseph Leiter entertained at luncheon in their honor yesterday in her home on Dupont Circle. Members of the bridal party, the parents of the bridegroom and the bride's mother were in the company that also included some of the out-of-town guests and a few others.

On Monday afternoon the former Miss Cootes and Mr. Belin were feted at a tea given by Judge and Mrs. Lawrence Groner, and on the same day they were guests of honor at a luncheon at which Mrs. Lee P. Warren was hostess. Other parties given for the couple include a tea given by Mrs. John F. Wilkins on Sunday afternoon.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

WHO'S BOUGHT the Hoover house? Ever since the S street home of the former President was sold out recently from under the present occupants, the Secretary of War and Mrs. Woodring, society has been speculating. The deal is shrouded in mystery, but now it's rumored that the former Attorney General and Mrs. Homer Cummings will be the new tenants.

At 2300 S street, near Mrs. Woodrow Wilson's house and the site of the future German Embassy, if it ever gets built, this home is admirably suited for entertaining. Opening off from a large hall is a study on one side, a dining room on the other, and a large living room and library in the rear, overlooking a garden sloping down to the street below.

MOSTLY at Republican dinner parties, which still flourish here even under a Democratic regime, a certain circular is being gleefully handed around among the guests. On it are printed the following definitions of socialism, communism, fascism and the New Deal: the first means that you have two cows and give one to the government; communism is giving both to the government and getting back the milk; fascism is keeping the cows, giving the milk to the government and getting back a part of it, while under the New Deal, says the circular, you shoot one cow, milk the other and then pour the milk down the sink.

HAD YOU HEARD THAT:

Mrs. Joseph Byrns, jr., wife of the newly elected Representative from Tennessee, has only been here since Congress opened but has already disposed of 300 calling cards? That Lady Lindsay, wife of the British Ambassador, has a calling list of 2,000? That her social secretary, Miss Irene Boyle, plans to make her home in Washington after the Ambassador retires this summer?

That Mrs. Ford K. Brown, better known as Leslie Ford, writer of mystery stories for a well-known magazine, is off to Charleston, S. C., shortly in search of a new setting for her yarns? She is the author of one successful serial which has a Georgetown background. A resident of Annapolis, she is often seen at Washington parties and was a guest at the Women's Press Club luncheon yesterday

That Mrs. Jouett Shouse will go to Florida the end of next month, and later to California with her father? That she is also considering a trip to Brazil next summer, having been asked to speak before a convention there?

THE STATE DEPARTMENT and the Brazilian Embassy are still in the throes of working up an entertainment program for Oswaldo Aranha, Foreign Minister of Brazil, who will arrive, probably by plane from Rio, February 8 or 9. But one thing is certain—the Secretary of the Treasury will give him a dinner while he's here for his official visit. It will probably be a stag affair, as the Morgenthau dining room is too small to seat all the men they'd like to have, plus wives.

WITH A GLEAM of humor in her eye, a guest at Mrs. Hugh Miller's tea yesterday afternoon went up to Mrs. Daniel C. Roper and said, "Why, Mrs. Roper, you never asked me on any of those yachting parties!" The humor evidently miscarried, as the wife of the former Secretary of Commerce launched into a long explanation of the parties, saying among other things that they didn't take place during her husband's administration.

Izetta Jewel, jr., daughter of the hostess, was guest of honor at this party. Tall, slim and blonde, she plays one of the ladies-in-waiting in the play "Victoria Regina" now at the National. She said that about a third of the cast had been with the play ever since it opened here in December, 1935—she herself has been with the company two years. In this time only a part of the costumes have had to be replaced, and that only once.

As Izetta Jewel, sr., Mrs. Miller was once leading lady of the old Columbia Theater company here. She looks not much older than her daughter, who yesterday wore a long dress of powder blue with a crimson panel down the front.

Among the throng of guests who gathered at the Women's Democratic Club to meet her were Mrs. Alben Barkley, Mrs. Blair Bannister, Mrs. Henry Grady, Mrs. James H. Hughes, Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward and many others.

Lady Marler Host to English Speaking Group

Canadian Envoy's Wife Entertains at Tea for Washington Branch

In true British tradition, members of the Washington branch of the English-Speaking Union made straight for the tea yesterday afternoon at the reception given for them by Lady Marler, wife of the Canadian Minister. This beverage was by far the most popular served at the party, which was attended by several hundred.

Most of the guests gathered in the dining room of the legation, with its walls paneled in heavy dark wood. The tea table was centered with red roses and baby's breath in a bronze vase. The delicacies included tiny pastry puffs filled with chicken and lobster, paper thin sandwiches of watercress and marmalade and small round pastries covered with powdered sugar.

Lady Marler, wearing a long gown of powder blue lace, with an amber necklace and earrings, received in the drawing room, assisted by Mrs. Bruce Wallace, secretary of the union. Members of the legation staff, headed by Mrs. Walter Riddell, the Counselor's wife, helped see that the guests had a pleasant time.

Among those who called were Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, who wore a silver fox scarf over her black coat, and one of her favorite tricorne hats; Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Houghteling, Mrs. Charles Hyde and her daughter-in-law, Mrs. John Hyde, Mrs. John Biddle, accompanied by Miss Lelia Peachy, Miss Josephine Rice and Lynch Luquer.

Mrs. Roosevelt Among Guests Gathered to Hear Former Czech Minister to London Speak

PRESIDENT and Mrs. Roosevelt didn't get together very well on their dates yesterday. The First Lady came to the weekly luncheon of the Women's National Press Club especially to hear Jan Masaryk, former Czech Minister to London and guest of honor at the function. Halfway through the meal, word came from the White House that the President would like to see Mr. Masaryk at 2:30. So-o, as the former diplomat had to entrain yesterday afternoon for Chicago, this was his only chance to chat with the Chief Executive, and he left the luncheon early.

Before departing, however, the son of the Founder-President of the Czech Republic gave a brief talk and answered several questions, the latter "off the record." Before one of the most socially prominent audiences to gather at a club luncheon this season, Mr. Masaryk, whose mother was an American, said that this country could exert a great influence in troubled Europe by continuing its example of spiritual leadership. He pointed out that few Americans realize how fortunate they are living in a land where freedom is still enjoyed.

Mr. Masaryk showed his years of diplomatic training by answering questions subtly, adroitly, and even, at times, humorously. He and Mrs. Roosevelt are friends of long standing, having become acquainted when the former was in Washington while Mr. Roosevelt was serving as Assistant Secretary of the Navy.

Four men and over 80 women gathered at the Willard yesterday for the luncheon, making the event one of the largest of the season. Mrs. Roosevelt, smartly turned out in a blue silk dress, small black hat with a stiff veil, and black tailored coat topped off by a silver fox scarf, answered questions "off the record" after the luncheon. The Minister of Czecho-Slovakia and Mme. Hurban were in the company.

Mrs. Robert Taft Among the Guests

Seen here and there: Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, wife of the Secretary of the Treasury, in a wine red frock and matching hat, seated at the head table next to Mrs. Homer S. Cummings; Mrs. Robert A. Taft, wife of the newly elected Senator from Ohio, who came in after the Senate ladies' luncheon; Mrs. Peter Goelet Gerry, wearing a stunning black ensemble; Mrs. Stanley S. Woodward and Mrs. Edwin Watson, both blondes and both dressed in brown, seated next to each other; Mrs. Charles Stanley White, Mrs. Thomas F. McAllister, Miss Maxine Davis with Mrs. John Carter Vincent, Mrs. Ford K. Brown (Leslie Ford) and Mrs. Edward Bruce, Mrs. Charles Broy, who has been rumored as this country's next envoy to the Soviet; Mrs. Joseph Byrns, jr., wife of the newly elected Representative from Tennessee; Mrs. Lewis Caldwell and Mrs. Thomas Burke.

Among the men present were E. B. Hitchcock, who is managing Mr. Masaryk's lecture tour and who is a former London correspondent for the Christian Science Monitor. He was accompanied by Erwin D. Canham, head of the Monitor's Washington bureau.

Mrs. Musser at Press Conference

Prior to the luncheon Mrs. Roosevelt held her weekly press conference at the White House, having as special guests Mrs. Burton W. Musser, of Utah, and Miss Katherine Lewis, of Alexandria, both of whom were official delegates from the United States to the recent Pan American Conference in Lima, Peru.

Talking informally, Mrs. Musser said that she felt the conference definitely advanced several steps in establishing women's rights and she spoke of the declaration in this regard, which was adopted at the conference. She further expressed herself as being personally in favor of equal rights, but with the provision that protective legislation be granted for women.

Miss Lewis, who briefly discussed the conference from the labor point of view, seemed to think that neither labor problems nor women's rights received the recognition they merited.

The two delegates did not see eye to eye on another point. While Mrs. Musser felt that representatives of the Latin-American countries welcomed the interest the United States had taken in them and in their welfare, Miss Lewis said she noted some resentment to the United States "because individuals in some instances have created an unfavorable impression for the country."

Following the part of the conference centered around Miss Lewis and Mrs. Musser, Mrs. Roosevelt answered questions regarding her impression of the recent Gallup Poll that announced her popularity as rising and as having already surpassed the President's. She said she had a feeling that when one carries no power, it is comparatively easy to win approval.

Mrs. Roosevelt Hostess at Tea

Yesterday afternoon Mrs. Roosevelt entertained at an informal tea at the White House. Today she will be the guest of Mrs. Harold Ickes at a luncheon at Headwaters Farm. This afternoon she will attend the tea of the General Federation of Women's Clubs and in the evening she will talk before the federation's convention at the Mayflower Hotel.

On Thursday evening President and Mrs. Roosevelt will entertain at their annual state dinner in honor of the Supreme Court. On Friday the First Lady will be feted at a luncheon given by Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, and that afternoon she will be hostess at another tea at the White House.

Mrs. Roosevelt will be in New York Saturday morning to speak at the luncheon given that day for John Elliott by the Ethical Culture Committee. She will return to the White House Saturday evening and on Sunday afternoon she will speak at the Woman's City Club. Her next press conference will take place on Monday at 11 o'clock and that same day she will talk before a luncheon meeting of the District of Columbia Council of Social Agencies.

Brilliant Reception Opens Mid-Winter Board Meeting of General Federation of Women's Clubs

Members of Congress Attend Dinner Given National Officers

More Than 600 Guests Received at Affair In Mayflower Hotel

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

A reception last night at the Mayflower Hotel, attended by more than 600 guests, marked the formal opening of the midwinter board meeting of the General Federation of Women's Clubs. It was preceded by a dinner given by the Maryland Federation of Women's Clubs, honoring the general federation officers.

Members of Congress attended as guests of the board members from their respective States, and others from official Washington also were among the guests as were clubwomen of the District, Maryland and Virginia.

Mrs. Saidie Orr Dunbar, president of the general federation, wearing a gown of black crepe, embroidered in rhinestones, and a corsage of orchids, headed the receiving line at one end of the ballroom where the reception was held. Other officers, trustees, department chairmen, past presidents and honorary vice presidents received with her.

Mrs. John L. Whitehurst, of Baltimore, first vice president, stood next to Mrs. Dunbar and wore a gown of royal blue, with a white fur jacket and white orchids. Others were Mrs. LaFell Dickinson, second vice president, in a beaded green crepe; Mrs. Horace B. Ritchie, recording secretary, wearing black embroidered net and orchids; Mrs. J. L. Blair Buck, the treasurer, in a gown of blue satin and rhinestones.

The past presidents include Mrs. Thomas G. Winter, who is now director of community service for the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America; Mrs. Roberta Campbell Lawson, immediate past president, who came from her home in Oklahoma, and Mrs. John F. Sippel, of Maryland.

Mrs. Emma Fox, veteran federation parliamentarian, and Miss Florence Deibert, both honorary vice presidents, were next in line. Beyond them were Mrs. S. Blair Luckie, chairman of the advisory committee on social security, maternal and child welfare service; Mrs. Ernest M. Galloway, chairman of the board of trustees; Mrs. Rowland H. Latham, chairman of the budget; Mrs. A. L. Washington Club Hears McNickle

Reorganization of tribal governments and preservation of the tribal arts are included in the new policy of the Indian administration of the Department of the Interior, D'Arcy McNickle, administrative assistant to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, told members of the Washington Club yesterday.

Reviewing the history of the administration, he said many of the present policies were in line with those of the past although others were a radical departure. In education, it is now recognized, he said, that the Indian child, like others, is better off at home and therefore reservation schools are replacing the boarding schools where effort was made to teach the young Indians only white culture. This was done on the mistaken theory the Indian was a vanishing race, he said. Now there is an awakened appreciation of Indian arts, an effort to preserve them and prevent their deterioration and to reorganize tribal government to assume responsibility for tribal affairs.

In addition to the talk by Mr. McNickle, the program included songs of the Chickashaw tribe given by Palmer Byrd, a native Chickashaw, in costume. Mr. McNickle is a member of the Flat Head tribe in western Montana.

Mrs. Edward B. Clark, in the absence of Mrs. Gilbert Gorsvenor, program chairman, presided.

A.A.U.W. Hears Lima Delegates

Mrs. Burton W. Musser, an official delegate to the recent conference in Lima, Peru, and Miss Mabel Vernon, director of the People's Mandate Committee, who went to the conference representing her organization and addressed a special recess, presenting the Mandate to End War, spoke last night at the American Association of University Women. They spoke at a dinner sponsored by the international relations section, of which Mrs. John Donaldson is chairman.

"The women of Latin America have been largely responsible for the strong peace movement found in most countries, a movement that is felt among the people in all walks of life and especially well organized in the schools, said Mrs. Musser." From the kindergarten up, they devote at least one weekly hour to peace and in some countries, notably in Brazil, there is a division in the department of education devoted to training for peace. This peace interest is one of the strongest bonds between the women of the north and the south. Such demonstrations as the presentation of the People's Mandate at Buenos Aires and Lima and the Mandate's Flying Caravan that covered South America in 1937 were most valuable contacts between the women of the Americas."

Taking as her theme "Women's Part in Inter-American Relations," Miss Vernon said: "The effectiveness and vitality of the declarations made by conferences depend in great part on the extent of informed public opinion on the questions dealt with in the countries concerned. Signs of increasing and encouraging interest in Inter-American Relations were evident at Lima in the number of observers and organization representatives who were present at the conference, all intelligent, alert people who represent and help create public opinion—and most of them were women!"

Labor Board Voids Militia's Maytag Ruling

Urges Bargaining With C.I.O. in Discharge Of 12 Strikers

By the Associated Press.

Minneapolis, Jan. 17.—Madison Hill, a trial examiner of the National Labor Relations Board, today recommended the Maytag Co., at Newton, Iowa, bargain with a C. I. O. union, and set aside findings of a military tribunal on the discharge of 12 striking workers.

Hill's report, said Robert J. Wiener, region director of the board, was to be served on the company and United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America, Local 1116.

The company posted notice of a 10 per cent wage cut May 9, 1938. The examiner said the company refused to negotiate with the union and some 400 employes staged a sit-down strike in protest.

The plant was closed from May 9 to August 4, 1938, when the board said it was "reopened under military guard." Newton and adjacent territory in Jasper County were under martial law in July and August and a military commission heard complaints.

Hill said he could not rely on the military commission hearing because its testimony was "designated as a military secret" and "no practical opportunity was given to the 12 men who were discharged either to face their accusers or to learn the nature of the offenses for the alleged commission of which they had been discharged."

City Opposes Bill To Bar Auto Tests At 'Farmers' Lot

The contract for the station already has been let and work is under way, Van Duzer said.

Scientist Says Licensing Might Stop Invention

Carnegie Institution Chief Upholds Present Law on Patent Use

By the Associated Press.

With a little metal gadget that turns electricity on and off in flatirons and other appliances, Dr. Vannevar Bush, president of the Carnegie Institution, illustrated his contention yesterday that the profit motive must be preserved in America's patent system.

A company with which he was connected as consulting engineer spent $100,000 to develop this tiny thermostat, Dr. Bush told the National Economic Committee. Had the patent laws not assured the concern a chance to profit, he said, the development would not have occurred and the public would not have enjoyed its benefit.

Jerome Frank, Securities Commissioner and a member of the committee investigating the economic system, had asked the scientist whether large corporations would abandon research if required by law to license use of their inventions at small royalties to anyone not intending to put them to antisocial purposes.

Present law grants patent-holders a 17-year monopoly upon the production and sale of their inventions.

Some corporations undoubtedly would abandon research under such a system, Dr. Bush said, although others would not. Many developments would never have come about, he added, had there been a system of compulsory general licensing of patents.

Through questioning of Dr. Bush and another witness, Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, developed the idea that large corporations often were able to sell their patents at extremely low prices. The Senator questioned also whether individual inventors could compete with the research laboratories of large companies, and whether the Government should do anything about this.

GHA Reports $12,000 Loss Last Year

Income $99,754; 800 Members Kill Peace Gesture to Capital Hospitals

Though expenses exceeded income by $12,000 in 1938 and despite a moderately decreasing membership, Group Health Association is "on the march," subscribers of the medical co-operative for Federal employes were told last night at their annual meeting.

W. C. Kirkpatrick, president, and Perry R. Taylor, business administrator, prophesied a bright future for the association, notwithstanding legal troubles, the hospitals' exclusion of staff doctors and other complications.

Eight hundred members attended the meeting, held in the Departmental Auditorium, which proceeded smoothly until a resolution was offered which would have placed the association on record against conditioning of Community Chest pledges.

Resolution Is Hissed

Patrick H. Loughran, an Agriculture Department lawyer, was hissed when he read his resolution, protesting that the practice of making Chest pledges conditioned upon the hospitals' opening their doors to G. H. A. staff physicians is "neither an appropriate nor an effective means of promoting Group Health Association."

The resolution was tabled, a small minority losing its fight to reconsider the motion to table.

Kirkpatrick said the association's clinic gave services to members in the year ended October 31, 1938, which would have cost them $122,400 at private rates. The amount, in dues, paid for these services was $65,700, he asserted.

Taylor revealed that last September the association borrowed $5,000 at 5 per cent interest. In the previous month income was the lowest since the clinic was founded in November, 1937.

For the year ended December 31, 1938, total income was $99,574 and expenses totaled $112,120. Largest revenue item was $77,750 in dues. The principal item of expense was salaries, $57,480, with costs of hospitalization and outside doctors' fees running second, $20,380.

As of December 31, the association had 2,115 members, including those delinquent in dues. On October 31 the register had slightly more than 2,400 names.

Taylor explained that, while the number of paid-up members has been increasing in the last few months, the number of delinquent subscribers has declined even more, resulting in a net figure which is somewhat smaller but represents a greater percentage of subscribers who pay dues regularly.

"Between 100 and 200 new members would put us in the black," said Taylor. He urged subscribers to become "good co-operative members" by soliciting their friends to join G. H. A.

Hospital Plan Deferred

The most significant development of last year, said Kirkpatrick, an official of the Home Owners Loan Corporation, was the branching out of G. H. A. to include not only employes of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and its agencies but those of 43 Federal departments and bureaus in the Capital.

He reviewed the association's legal battles, the recent decision of Garfield Hospital to give courtesy privileges to three of the clinic's 11 physicians, and the reasons for introducing a higher dues schedule last September.

For the year ended October 31, 1938, subscribers received 30,967 consultations at the clinic, valued at $73,589 on a private fee basis, the president said. In addition, 19,886 physical therapy, X-ray, fluoroscopic and other types of treatments, including laboratory examinations, were given. These were estimated to be worth more than $148,000.

Kirkpatrick pointed out that these services did not include hospitalization, surgical operations and obstetrical cases, upon which no figures were presented.

A resolution was adopted voicing confidence in policies of the GHA clinic, the action resulting from criticism expressed earlier this month by Dr. Richard H. Price upon resignation as a member of the staff.

Trustees were elected as follows: Three-year terms, Roy F. Hendrickson, Agriculture Department; Leonard J. Calhoun, Social Security Board, and A. C. Edwards, Civil Service Commission. Two-year term, Dr. Max A. McCall, Agriculture Department. One-year term, Cameron G. Garman, Farm Credit Administration. The vote between Miss Edith Rockwood, Department of Labor, and Dr. Louise Stanley, Agriculture Department, was so close decision was held up for a second count.

Mutual Plan Maturing

The District Medical Society last night announced that details of mutual health service, its proposed system of medical care for low-salaried residents, are rapidly nearing completion.

Additional votes in favor of the plan have been received from members of the society, it was reported. Last month the membership decided by an overwhelming ballot to launch the pre-payment project.

The committee on medical economics will meet tomorrow night to work out further details, preparatory to submitting the completed plan to the society membership for approval.

The committee making arrangements for the society's annual scientific assembly, at the Hotel Mayflower April 25-27, yesterday announced that personal invitations to attend will be sent to practicing physicians of Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia. This year's program will be in the form of a condensed postgraduate course in gastroenterology.

At the society's weekly scientific meeting tonight a symposium on affections of the kidneys in infancy and childhood will be held.

Citizens Groups Back Overton D. C. Tax Plan

Sliding Scale Favored For Federal Grants; New Georgia Ave. Cars Asked

Indorsement for Senator Overton's plan of sliding scale Federal grants to the District was voted last night by two citizens' associations and one business group. Growing support for new street cars on Georgia avenue was reported by business men of the area.

Georgia Avenue Business Men's Association

More than 1,500 names have been appended to a petition requesting the Capital Transit Company for new street cars on the Georgia avenue line, it was reported last night at the monthly meeting of the Georgia Avenue Business Men's Association.

Another 5,000 residents reached by the car line are expected to sign the petition within the coming month, association officials said.

Approval for Senator Overton's proposal to tax local Federal property as a contribution toward District expenses was voted and proposed new taxes in the District were discussed. A law committee was appointed to study and report on the tax proposals with a recommendation which will be submitted by the association to Congress.

Letters of congratulation were voted for Capt. Floyd B. Truscott, recently appointed to the Tenth Precinct and to Representative Jennings Randolph, of West Virginia, on his appointment to the chairmanship of the House District Committee.

Members appointed to the law committee are Milton R. Vollmer, William F. Partlow, E. L. Edwards, Claud Corr and E. Wenger.

Petworth Citizens

Opposition to licensing a liquor store in the 800 block of Upshur street northwest was voted last night by the Petworth Citizens Association, at its meeting in the Petworth School. Members pointed out store would be within a block of Macfarland Junior High and Roosevelt High School.

The association indorsed Senator Overton's plan for measuring the Federal contribution to the District by the amount of Federal-owned real estate here. A resolution was adopted scoring charity rackets following a talk by Robert Simon, president of the Retired Firemen's Association.

Three delegates appointed to the Citizens' Conference on District Suffrage were: Earl W. Cooper, Ernest F. Henry, and Horace J. Phelps. Plans were outlined for dedication of the new Petworth branch of the Public Library on January 27.

Columbia Heights

Opposition to the proposed chain store tax, commendation for Senator Overton's tax plan and approval of self-government for Washington citizens was voted last night by the Citizens Forum of Columbia Heights.

Miss Eddie Dickert, Miss Blanche Philpot and George Carpenter were admitted to membership in the organization.

Falls on Ice Put 2 in Hospitals Here

Charles N. Shields, 28, of 4019 Ninth street northeast, suffered fractures of the hip and left leg, yesterday when he fell on an ice coated stairway while working on a construction job at Connecticut avenue and Davenport street northwest. He was admitted to Emergency Hospital.

Ernest M. Foust, 39, 4834 Seventh street northwest, was seriously injured when he slipped on ice and struck his head. He was admitted to Walter Reed Hospital.

Darr Elected As Head of District Bar

Committee Named to Investigate Complaint Over Subpenas by Marshal's Office

Sefton Darr, Washington attorney for 22 years and a veteran of the World War, last night was named president of the District Bar Association at the annual meeting in the Mayflower Hotel.

The 45-year-old lawyer, who has served on the association's board of directors and on many of its most important committees, was elected by a vote of 507 to 354 over Godfrey L. Munter, president since the retirement of Bolitha J. Laws last year. Announcement of the election climaxed a meeting marked by the following developments:

Appointment of a three-man committee to investigate complaints the United States Marshal's office is requiring defendants in criminal cases to pay for subpenas for witnesses, and is refusing to issue subpenas after 4 p. m.

Announcement of Arthur J. Hilland, vice chairman of a committee to investigate grievances in Police Court, that his group now had under consideration several cases involving solicitation of clients, attempts to vary testimony, fee splitting with bondsmen, and coercion on the part of the bondsmen to employ one attorney regularly in preference to another.

Presentation of a report by Richard L. Merrick, former chairman of the committee on suppression of unauthorized practice of law, declaring the Court of Appeals for the District had failed to furnish a guide on what constitutes practice of law in the District in its decision Monday dismissing a plea for a judgment to define the activities of the American Security & Trust Co.

Others Elected

Elected with Darr were James C. Wilkes, first vice president; Bernard G. Ostmann, second vice president; Wilbur L. Gray, secretary; Francis W. Hill, jr., treasurer; David A. Hart, Charles V. Imlay, and E. Barrett Prettyman, new members of the board. Members of the board continuing in office are John J. Carmody, Robert F. Cogswell, and Joseph T. Sherier.

Darr was born in Washington, took his pre-legal training at Catholic University, and received his law degree from Georgetown University in 1916. He enlisted for service in the World War, and in France was promoted to first lieutenant.

He entered practice with the law firm of his father, Charles W. Darr. He is former chairman of the municipal court committee of the association, and was active in working for establishment of the present small claims court in the District. He has offices in the Woodward Building.

Member of Many Clubs

He is a member of the Army-Navy Club, the American Legion, the University Club, City Club and Elks. He and Mrs. Darr and their two children live at 3375 Stephenson place northwest.

In reporting on the Bar Association's struggle for limiting power of trust firms to practice law, Merrick declared "if the decision of the Court of Appeals in its present form is to stand, the practice of probate law in the District by the active practicioner of law outside of a bank or trust company is gone forever for the reason that we cannot hope to compete with the trust companies in advertising even though the ethics of our profession should be relaxed to sanction such procedure."

His report declared the court had failed to discuss the question of its power or the power of the lower court to regulate practice of law in the District. The report was referred to the board of directors.

Complaints Eliminated

Frederick A. Ballard, chairman of the committee on civil rights, reported the Corporation Counsel's office had eliminated grounds for complaints of former years on discriminatory enforcement of police regulations against unpopular minorities.

A report by the ethics committee held it was improper for lawyers to have their names printed in the city directory in bold face type, or in the blue book section. The report declared such listings were a form of advertisement out of line with the ethical code of the American Bar Association.

The police court committee promised continued study of mispractice. Their statement declared "the report is commonplace in the corridors of the Court House that if you name the bondsman the attorney's name can be given in seven out of ten cases and vice versa. This situation results not by accident but by design."

$750 Stolen From Store

Dave Margolis reported to police last night the theft of $750 in suits and overcoats from his store at 701 Twenty-second street northwest.

'Ride' Victim Saved by Auto Crash

'Shotgun Bandits' Say They Planned Murder Plot; Pair Identified By Robbed Persons

How a "lucky" auto crash saved the life of a Washington gang leader who was being taken for a ride by his accomplices was revealed by District police officials last night.

Two young District men, who between them have confessed to 15 major holdups in Washington and Arlington, Va., also admitted to police that on the night of December 9 after a series of raids on District liquor stores, they had planned to kill the "brains" of the gang and make a getaway.

Prevented Murder Plot

Only an unforeseen collision with another car on K street northwest, between Sixteenth and Seventeenth street prevented their murder plot, according to police. Because they were riding in a stolen auto, they had to abandon it after the crash and scatter.

Meanwhile, 15 victims of the gang, known as the "shotgun bandits," identified the two men being held by police.

"There's that man again," declared Martin Berman, of 903 Monroe street northwest, pointing at one of the desperadoes. Berman had twice been victimized by the robbers. Berman, William Berman, Frank Zanringl, of 45 Shepherd street, Hyattsville, and Nelson Brown, of 1320 R street northwest, had been held up at a liquor store in 2600 block Connecticut avenue on December 9. All identified the two men as the bandits.

Many Identify Pair

William Allen and Emery Johnson, of Arlington, whose description of a "shotgun bandit" they had disarmed and unmasked during a struggle in Pershing Drug Store, Arlington, led to the capture of one suspect, also were on hand to identify them.

Other identifications were made by Lowen Bollin, 15 Gallatin street northwest, Clifford E. Wright, 1447 Massachusetts avenue northwest, and George E. Good, who were held up in a store at 1424 L street northwest December 9; Paul G. Demont, Harkin S. Hodges, held up at 3910 Fourteenth street northwest.

Others were Athena Courembis, proprietor of a liquor store at Eleventh and M streets northwest, and Robert Grady, 1017 M street northwest, robbed at the store December 9; R. J. Kelly and Virgil Daly, held up January 5 at 314 Sixth street northwest.

Dragged From His Car

Last night four colored men dragged John G. Linthicum, 3715 Thirtieth place northeast, from his car, beat him and escaped with $88 at Eighth and M streets northwest.

The Rev. Thomas M. Kilduff reported theft of a quantity of cash from two poor boxes at the Carmelite Mission, 150 Rhode Island avenue northeast.

Auto Club Asks System to Save Time for Police

To improve enforcement of District traffic regulations, the Keystone Automobile Club advisory board last night advocated that policemen be called into court only once a week to testify in cases involving minor infractions.

Such a system, said George Keneipp, manager of the club and secretary to the board, now is used in Baltimore and traffic officers are permitted more time on the streets to enforce major regulations. Policemen in Washington, under the present method, are required to appear in court daily and often remain several hours before their cases are disposed of, Keneipp pointed out.

The board also advocated removal of all directional arrows on street car loading platforms which have not been authorized by the police department or Department of Vehicles and Traffic. "Bottleneck" conditions result from the present policy of requiring all vehicles to pass to the right of loading zones, the board was told.

Boys, 5 and 6, Hide; Firemen Free Them

Roger A. Shriver, , and John Patterson, 5, were playing "cops and robbers" yesterday. The game ended when they locked themselves up—by accident—in closet in the Shriver home at 1770 Church street northwest.

It took a fire rescue squad 18 minutes to remove the pins from the door hinges and free them. John lives at 1700 Church street northwest.

New Orleans Court Denies Rehearing Of Beard's Case

By the Associated Press.

New Orleans, Jan. 17.—The United States Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals here today announced denial of a rehearing in the habeas corpus case of Sam R. Beard, convicted on a gambling charge in the District of Columbia.

Beard, who has two more years to serve of a two to six-year sentence in the Atlanta Federal Penitentiary, sought his release by habeas corpus action, claiming "double jeopardy."

The Circuit Court in a previous denial of Beard's petition November 5 said all questions urged in the habeas corpus appeal had been disposed of in the criminal trial and were passed upon by the courts of the District of Columbia.

Clay Modeling Soothes Bad Boys, Club Head Reports

When everything else fails, John Young, supervisor of Metropolitan Police Boys Club, No. 2, turns to clay modeling to tempt his young charges from mischief.

Thus far, he told Police Superintendent Ernest W. Brown in his annual report yesterday, modeling never has failed him.

"Numerous psychiatric cases come to us, become quite interested in clay modeling . . . and eventually turn from the handicapped class into splendid young men," Young, a former Howard University football star, declared.

15 Seized in Raids; Gin, Drugs Found

The police pickup squad, headed by Lieut. Joe Shimon, early this morning arrested 15 persons, including two women, in a series of raids.

They confiscated 100 gallons of gin and whiskey, a quantity of narcotics and several articles listed as stolen. Suspects will face a line-up for identification and will be fingerprinted for a Federal Bureau of Investigation checkup.

Broken Water Pipe Ices Hill; 6 Cars Pile Up at Bottom

A water main broke on the Tilden street hill near the entrance to Rock Creek Park last night, and presently ice covered the street for a half block.

Six motorists discovered the ice when their cars went into simultaneous skids and—ultimately—collided. The cars belonged to:

A. F. Riley, 4111 Emory place northwest; James Medley, 5603 Wilson lane; Harvey Baxter, 3900 Connecticut avenue; John A. Aryno, 4627 Forty-third street northwest; J. P. Horan, 4529 Davenport street northwest, and Mary G. Smith, 4927 Brandywine street northwest.

Second Warring Trial Is Set for February 1

The second trial of Emmitt, Leo Paul and Charles (Rags) Warring, numbers operators, and Gordon L. R. Sadur, their income tax expert, for conspiracy to defraud the Treasury, was set for February 1 by Justice Laws yesterday.

The jury disagreed when the four were tried last fall.

White House Ceremony To Attract Leaders From All Parts of U. S.

President Roosevelt will be inducted into membership in the Lions International at ceremonies at the White House February 23, it was announced last night before a meeting of Lions clubs of Washington and Prince Georges and Montgomery counties at the Kenwood Golf and Country Club.

Hugh V. Keiser, deputy District governor of the Lions, who presided, invited all club members present to a luncheon at the Mayflower Hotel immediately after the induction ceremony.

Leaders of Lions clubs throughout the country will be in Washington for the ceremony, Keiser said.

In a speech, "Munich, a Sham Battle for Peace," that preceded the announcement, Dr. James T. Lowe, Carnegie Fellow of international law at Georgetown University, told the meeting German war planes would have made a shambles of Paris and London had the British and French sent armed forces to prevent the division of Czecho-Slovakia.

"The peace plan at Munich, while it appears a victory for the dictators, really is a victory for the democracies because it allows them to rearm and to lift themselves to a superior plane if war comes," he added.

Health Unit Chief Reports Aid to 50,000

D. C. Organization Has Data on Which To Base National Program, He Says

The Health Security Administration of Washington, one of the Nation's pioneer agencies in providing for needy sick, served more than 50,000 persons last year, Dr. Henry C. Macatee, president, reported last night.

He said, at the annual meeting, that the Community Chest unit in 1938 arranged 291,925 clinic visits for 45,099 individuals and 95,400 hospital bed days for 8,203 persons.

Dr. Macatee was re-elected president for 1939. Other officers chosen last night were Willard C. Smith, health chairman of the Council of Social Agencies, and Dr. Watson W. Eldridge, of St. Elizabeths Hospital, vice presidents; Edward H. Kavin, American Red Cross, treasurer, and Ross Garrett, administrator.

New Trustees Named

The new board of trustees for this year consists of the officers and the following: Dr. J. B. Burke, District Dental Society; Dr. William DeKleine, medical director, American Red Cross; Dr. Francis J. Eisenman, superintendent of Garfield Hospital; Mrs. Ernest R. Grant, executive director, District Tuberculosis Association; Dr. Oscar B. Hunter, Dr. J. Bay Jacobs, Owen Lovejoy, Leifur Magnusson, Dr. Margaret Nicholson, Dr. Herbert Ramsey and B. B. Sandidge, superintendent of Emergency Hospital.

The Health Society Administration was organized in 1935. Community Chest payments to hospitals for services to patients referred by H. S. A. totaled $276,466 in 1938.

Dr. Macatee paid tribute to "infinite resourcefulness of Administrator Garrett and to personnel of the agency, located at Eighth and I streets northwest.

Data, Experience Ready

"Now that public opinion seems to be rapidly approaching the decision that tax funds shall be made available for care of the medically indigent, the data, experience and methods are at hand by which existing facilities may be utilized and not exploited in the application of such funds," he declared.

"It will be by the use of such privately conceived agencies as this, if properly supported and appreciated by the public, that useless and wasteful experimentation may be avoided."

12,000 Beginning Semester Examinations In Capital and Nearby Universities

More than 12,000 students in Washington's institutions of higher learning today are wandering dazedly, murmuring to themselves.

They are not psychopathic cases, however. They are just college students—victims of the jitters that precede first semester examinations beginning tomorrow at some colleges.

For most of the students the "agony" is to be prolonged. Examinations begin later this week or next week at most of the schools.

Early this week students began "hibernating" with books. Forsaking social affairs for knowledge, they have been burning midnight oil in final spurts of "cramming," a practice both condoned and condemned by psychologists.

Despite all the corrugated brows and "grinds," most of the students will "forget all" in series of social activities which will fill the gap between first and second semester periods.

At George Washington University, where examinations begin January 28, plans are already under way for the "All-University Prom," biggest affair of the year, scheduled for February 4.

Examinations at G. W. will be over February 3, and the entire student body will "let off steam" at the prom, to be held in the Willard Hotel.

Students at American University begin first semester examinations tomorrow and finish January 26.

Georgetown University students, just getting into the swing of "boning," will begin taking exams Monday and will finish January 31.

At Catholic University, students will begin examinations January 30 and remain under the tension through February 4. Just over the District line, in College Park, Md., University of Maryland students tomorrow will take their first examinations. They, too, will top things off with a series of social affairs.

Girls at Chevy Chase Junior College, just over the District line on Connecticut avenue, will start examinations Monday and continue throughout the week.

Whiteman Breaks Dates For Birthday Ball Here

Dean of Modern American Music Here on Jan. 30; A Helpful Letter Comes to Hand Opportunely; News Notes and Jottings of Amusements

THE preeminence among the national observances of the President's Birthday Celebrations achieved by the activities conducted in the National Capital is reflected in the enthusiastic attitude of Paul Whiteman toward participation in the local events, scheduled for the night of Monday, January 30.

BELL

Mr. Whiteman is the latest national notable to add his name to the list of stars who will be here for the January 30 gala proceedings. He and his complete organization of 35 instrumentalists and specialists will provide the music and entertainment for the President's Birthday Ball to be held in the Mayflower on January 30 from 9 p. m. to 1 a. m.

To accept this invitation of the general and entertainment committees to be present on this occasion, Mr. Whiteman declined a similar invitation to appear at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York and canceled a professional engagement in the Midwest in order to reach Washington on time. His prompt and helpful response to the invitation of the entertainment committee was so immediate and generous that he has been named as an honorary vice chairman of that committee.

Paul Whiteman is one of the pioneers in the development of modern American music. For 20 years he has bent his constant energies and resourcefulness, as a musician reared in the symphonic school, to the rescue of "modern music" from the early dissonances of a noisy and disturbing "jazz" form to the suave and impressive nuances of symphonic rhythms. He has been a record-breaking artist in every outlet of musical expression—on the stage, on the screen, over the air, on the phonograph recordings and in the rarified classic concert atmosphere of Carnegie Hall in New York, where on more than one occasion he has made musical history.

Is an Outdoor Record-Breaker

For the past two summers he has topped every known record for outdoor dance attendance when he has played at the Casa Manana in Texas. Only recently, he drew 29,000 music lovers to his open-air concert in Newark, N. J.

That is the sort of attraction that will be available to celebrants of the President's Birthday at the Mayflower a week from next Monday night. To accomodate the pretentious "production" that Whiteman requires for the fullest exposition of his musical showmanship, it will be necessary to rebuild and enlarge the entire stage occupying one end of the grand ballroom at the Mayflower. That is an enterprise in which Manager Pollio and his executive associates now are gleefully engaged.

Whiteman, after all these years, still is the "daddy of 'em all." Washington is fortunate to have secured his services for this magnificent charity.

In the meantime, the list of screen stars to be present in Washington over the January 29 week-end mounts with amazingly gratifying rapidity. There are many distinguished names still to be announced. They will come along to the public prints tomorrow, next day and practically all of next week, there are that many of them. And some of them will be names to conjure with. The total roster will span the whole field of Hollywood's productional activities, from super-super features to the Westerns and short-reel comedies. Something for every taste, calculated to arouse the interest in and patronage of the President's Birthday balls by an all-embracing cross-section of the District's "movie fans." You can already secure your tickets, if you get about it.

The Press Enjoys a Visit With Helen Hayes

Dear Boss: Here's hoping you can tear yourself away from your Presidential Birthday Ball plottings long enough to learn what you missed yesterday.

A while back John Barrymore in Hollywood sent a telegram to one Mary MacArthur in New York which read something like this:

"Your debut watched with great interest out here. Understand they want you for Scarlett O'Hara in 'Gone With the Wind.'"

Mary MacArthur was making her stage debut on her seventh birthday. It was a present from her mother and the most important thing which had yet happened to a young lady whose life so far had been that of any country youngster and not that of the daughter of a queen of the American Theater. So Mary received one line in "Victoria Regina" and it was a proud and anxious Helen Hayes who peered at her young daughter through the aged Queen Victoria's make-up in the final "Happy and Glorious" scene of the Laurence Housman vignettes. She was, she told us yesterday, far more excited even than Mary. She, too, had made her first appearance on the stage on her seventh birthday.

The refreshingly natural Miss Hayes, blue-eyed and tiny, was making a trio of the press at home in her comfortable apartment. She snuggled into a corner of the sofa and tucked her feet under her.

We talked of everything from why you weren't there—she wanted me to say "Hello" for her—to the offer she'd had to play in "Gone With the Wind."

After three years of "Victoria" she's not the least bit tired of her. It's all she can do to keep from adding little touches as she goes along, the way, for instance, she added that laugh of the grand "Mom." It seems that at one matinee there was a little old lady, round and imperious like Victoria, who sat in the second row and laughed in just such a way as we hear Victoria laugh now. Until then Miss Hayes says she hadn't been able to find the right regal laugh, but that afternoon she caught it. At home that night she practiced it and in the laugh went the next day. When Miss Hayes met the Queen of Spain, granddaughter and namesake of Victoria, at tea not long after, Her Majesty smiled at her: "Where did you ever hear my grandmother laugh?" Miss Hayes feels it to be one of the most gratifying comments on the part which she has sought to interpret as that of a woman who saw her job and did it well.

The man of the family, Charles MacArthur, has finished his Hollywood writing chores on "Gunga Din" and is chafing at the travel bit. Now that Miss Hayes is in her last few performances of the season, he has plans for a jaunt to Egypt. "That's not too bad" sighs Miss Hayes dreamily, "but last week in Boston he was all up in the air about going to China and when I asked him if there wasn't some sort of a war there, he just waved his hands and said that we shouldn't be too bothered by that." But the fireside above the cliffs of the Hudson, her two children and her husband is what she looks forward to most these days.

And then? All of us wanted to see her play different parts. There's a new play her husband has written which she wants to do but . . . And the Shakespearean parts now that her "The Merchant of Venice" must wait for casting; Viola of the "Twelfth Night" is one of her favorites. As uncertain as a Congressman's future seems the "next" on the Hayes list of portrayals.

As a Washingtonian Miss Hayes feels thoroughly at home in our town. Her aunt dropped by and they were going to go to the "movies." Don't ask me which one, for they didn't know either. I wonder what one they finally went to?

So the trio tripped out, feeling they had had a swell visit with a real person, who was doing work she loved and was interested in many other things besides her profession.

There Was a Preview Yesterday, Too

That "Stand Up and Fight" screening turned out to be a knock-down, drag-out fight and history lesson rolled into one. If Robert Taylor is not acknowledged a real he-man after the lambasting he both takes from and gives Wallace Beery, we all have another film coming. Concerning slave-trading and the rivalry of the iron horse and the stage coach, it gives a rough-and-tumble version of life at the frontier which was Cumberland, Md., before the compromise of 1850. Sepia tint and authentic background give it an added zing, which should be all the more popular in this part of the world, with the Maryland locale practically at the back door.

Beery has a typical Beery part and Taylor makes an especially credible figure of Blake Cantrell, the aptly named hero. Florence Rice continues the career any good newspaperman's daughter should have on the Pacific gold coast. Helen Broderick, Charles Bickford and an old steam engine, whose name we couldn't catch, are others important in it.

Also, make a note of an excellent colored actor yclept Clinton Rosemond who does some smart miming as Enoch, Taylor's unhappy slave. Yours, DICK.

Some-People-Get-All-the-Best-of-It Note

FOUR CHARMING GIRLS FIND A WILLING PATIENT

This would be in "Four Girls in White," a new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer release, that will come eventually to the local screen. Left to right—The "Four Girls" are Florence Rice, Ann Rutherford, Mary Howard and the long-absent Una Merkel. The victim of their wiles is Buddy Ebsen, who seems an enthusiastic subject of the "medical profession." Who wouldn't be, under the circumstances?

" . . . and when you go to those night clubs, drink a lot of tomato juice, dear. It's good for you . . . What? . . . Tomato juice doesn't look like an exciting drink? . . . Well, that's easily fixed . . . If you want it to be exciting, just imagine you're drinking blood"

12 P. M.: "Bob Hague, the Standard Oil official and husband of Mary Lewis," a publisher informs at the Cotton Club, "just got back from Germany and is in Tucson now, recovering. The real reason he went to Germany was to wind up Standard Oil's business there" . . . They'll tell her, as Britain's best-dressed woman, its her duty—to boost Australian wool and help boycott Japan" . . . "Now that Frankfurter has the Supreme Court job," a Washington official declares at La Cava, "Jerome Frank, the SEC commissioner, will get that Circuit Court of Appeals judgeship in Washington" . . . "Twelve executions are scheduled to be held in Sing Sing within the next eight weeks," Warden Lawes laments at Sardi's. "I wish I could sail away now—on a long trip."

After that, so help me, I'm going to a drama school to learn how to act" . . . "Barbara Loew, former wife of Oscar Levant, will be in 'The American Way,'" an agent reports at Cafe Society. "And Levant will conduct the show's orchestra" . . . "That reminds me," a publicist relates, "C. C. N. Y. invited Levant to address the college students. 'Do you mind,' Oscar told them, 'if I get through high school first?'" . . . "Well, we wanted to make this club exclusive," an official laments at the defunct Elbow Room. "It looks like we outdid ourselves—because nobody came."

2 A. M.: "Joe Alsop, the Washington columnist, rushed into Alec Woollcott's room and said, 'I can't stay. I'm lunching with Herbert Hoover.'" a playwright reports at Tony's. "'What wonderful lives you newspaper men lead,'" Woollcott replied. "'always meeting the Man of the Moment. I myself am having dinner with Chester A. Arthur'" . . . "George Bowden, of Chicago," an attorney declares at the Artists and Writers Club, "will be the next president of the National Lawyers Guild" . . . "When the referee was collecting the judges' slips at the Farr-Burman fight the gamblers were betting ten to one that Burman would get the decision," Joe Gould is told at Dempsey's. "They figured the judges never have had a chance to learn how to spell 'Farr'" . . . "I don't blame you for coming East," Frankie Hyers announces to Franchot Tone at the 18 Club. "After all, California made a helluva trade—The Gimp for Tom Mooney."

"Hickman Powell," a reporter informs at the Swing Club, "who helped write Tom Dewey's campaign speeches, is writing a book—about the Luciano case."

4 A. M.: "Three times I tried to phone Max Schmeling, via transatlantic phone," Joe Jacobs declares at Reuben's, "but couldn't get him. "I'll go to Berlin to find him—if Tony Galento will come with me" . . . "I spoke to John Amen, Brooklyn's Special Prosecutor," a city official states at Lindy's, "and he insisted that no witness in his investigation will receive any money at all—not even for railroad fare."

5 A. M.: "Gregory LaCava just told us this," an agent reports at Dave's. "When he was making 'My Man Godfrey,' he ordered one scene stopped, and told 'em: 'You haven't found Godfrey yet.' LaCava then ordered some drinks for the crowd, and he had William Powell hoisted a few. The next morning LaCava got a phone-call from Powell. 'Greg,' the movie star told him, 'by now we may have found Godfrey—but we've lost Powell. I can't show up today!'"

6 A. M.: " . . . and they want you to go on 'Information Please'? . . . Well, dear, my advice is take it—but insist upon one condition—that they ask a few questions to which the answer is 'He was at the Stork Club last night.'"

Busiest Actor Is a Versatile Young Man

Ray Whitley Began in Subway, Now Acts, Sings, Records and Conducts

By Frederick C. Othman.

United Press Hollywood Correspondent.

Hollywood, Jan. 17.—Ever hear of Ray Whitley? Odds are that you haven't, yet he's one of the busiest actors in Hollywood.

He's a musical cowboy. He appears in all the George O'Brien cow operas at R-K-O. When they're not in production, he stars in his own right in a series of Western two-reelers. He also writes songs, sings on radio programs, performs at the Madison Square Garden Rodeo, leads an orchestra, plays in vaudeville, and acts as master of ceremonies. In his spare time he makes phonograph records.

Nobody has ever interviewed him for the newspapers. Probably nobody ever will. He's too busy. We tried today on a sound stage where he was in the midst of "Western short number four," It'll get a title later.

Whitley is a nice looking young fellow with a Southern drawl and a cowboy suit, but every time he'd open his muth, the director would shout:

"Ray, we're ready."

He'd have to go before the camera and act in a scene. Then he'd come back to talk some more and—boom!—he'd have to perform again. The two-reelers are manufactured more rapidly than any other kind of film. They cost around $17,000 to make; they're finished usually in three days flat, and everybody works in such a hurry that there's no time for temperament, art—or interviews. We hung around all morning, though, and besides getting an eyeful of movie-making on an auto factory schedule, we learned some strange things about Whitley.

Five years ago he was an Alabama farm boy, who twanged a little on a banjo after work. One nght he heard a radio hill-billy singing sour cowboy songs.

"I can do better than that," Whitley muttered. He threw up his job and hitch-hiked to New York. The last man who gave him a ride turned out to be a subcontractor, helping build a new subway. He offered Ray a job as an iron-worker's helper.

That was a lucky thing. It enabled Whitley to eat while he looked for work as a singer. He spent most of his first week's salary for a second-hand guitar and tried the radio stations. They told him there was no market for hill-billies any more.

"But I'm not a hill-billy," Ray insisted. "I sing cowboy songs."

The manager of a minor station finally told him that if he felt he was so good, he could sing 15 minutes a night for a few nights on a sustaining program—that is—if he'd do it free. He jumped at the chance. For two solid years he pounded rivets on the subway by day and sang on the radio by night. Then he quit, because the station wouldn't raise his salary of nothing per week. The listeners kicked, and Ray went back to singing, for pay. Then an R-K-O scout spied him, and the rest has been easy.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Jan. 17.—At 5:31 p. m. Friday the 13th Mr. Birdwell, David Selznick's Boswell, was on the phone giving out with the glad tidings that at 5:30 Mr. Selznick had decided upon his Scarlett, Vivian Leigh, and Leslie Howard for Ashley.

HEDDA HOPPER

Now, why call me? Why not the House of Parliament in England, and say, "Well, you've won again."

When George Bernard Shaw said he was going to teach America how to make pictures, he was right. But unfortunately, he said, "America" instead of "Americans!" Do you suppose for one moment he would have put Ann Sheridan or any typical American girl into Miss Hiller's part in "Pygmalion?" No! You can bet your bottom dollar he wouldn't. Of course, we justify ourselves by saying, "After all, Helen Hayes played Queen Victoria." And why not? Helen Hayes is our finest actress with years of experience behind her. Just as Victoria was England's finest queen. You see, we gave her the best we had. But to compare that with an unknown whom we've seen only as a heavy in "Yank at Oxford," is a little ludicrous.

And the joke of the whole thing is that Miss Leigh didn't want the part in the first place and only came to America to be near her boy friend, Laurence Olivier, who's playing in "Wuthering Heights."

And now I understand the courts and our front pages will be cluttered up with a few more lawsuits. And all this time we've had a committee of 56 members working right here in the heart of Hollywood on Americanism. And they've been telling us that charity begins at home.

I'm a little late reporting this, but Mr. Selznick was two years deciding on his Scarlett. And out of millions of American women couldn't find one to suit him. Which would seem to cast a reflection on every girl born here.

But here's one of the thousands of letters I've received in protest which I think clarifies it much better than I ever could. Here it is:

"My dear Miss Hopper: Many times we have been told that Hollywood motion picture producers are crazy. I resented this, but now I'm convinced that those who spoke knew their onions. Witness the almost unbelievable news that David Selznick has chosen a (practically) unknown 'English' actress to do Scarlett O'Hara—the most typical American role of modern times.

"One can hardly believe that a producer in his right mind and who intends to pour millions of dollars into a picture could possible make such a colossal mistake. Scarlett O'Hara is Southern, old Southern. With traditions and inborn instincts of the South. How in the name of common sense can an English actress possibly understand Scarlett, her times or the characterization is beyond a thinking American. It makes as much sense as if England had sent for Jack Oakie to play King George at the coronation.

"Miss Leigh may be a capable player. Her part in 'Yank at Oxford' was a pleasing characterization but of no great importance. She did well in the English manner because she understood it. But Scarlett? No, a thousand times, no!

"The press splurge that giving Miss Leigh the role would amplify the English market, is silly on the face of it. Why didn't England, to amplify American trade, employ Jimmie Cagney to do Henry the Eighth, instead of their own Laughton?

"I admit we have many fine English players in our midst. But most of them, entrusted with important roles, have had many years in the American theater and studios. And, at least, they have gained, in a manner, an American viewpoint. Miss Leigh has lived and breathed England all her acting life. To trust her with the important role of an American woman of the Civil War period, seems idiotic and almost an insult to American actresses and audiences. I'm sure millions of Americans will stay away from the picture in a gesture of protest.

"And, oh, Miss Hopper, if I had a column!" (Signed, Kay Clement Peddell.)

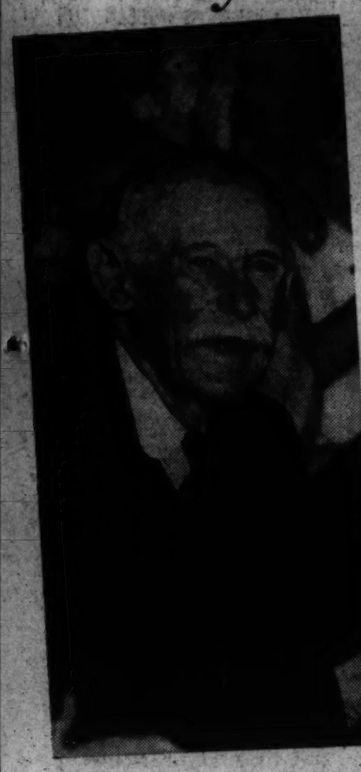
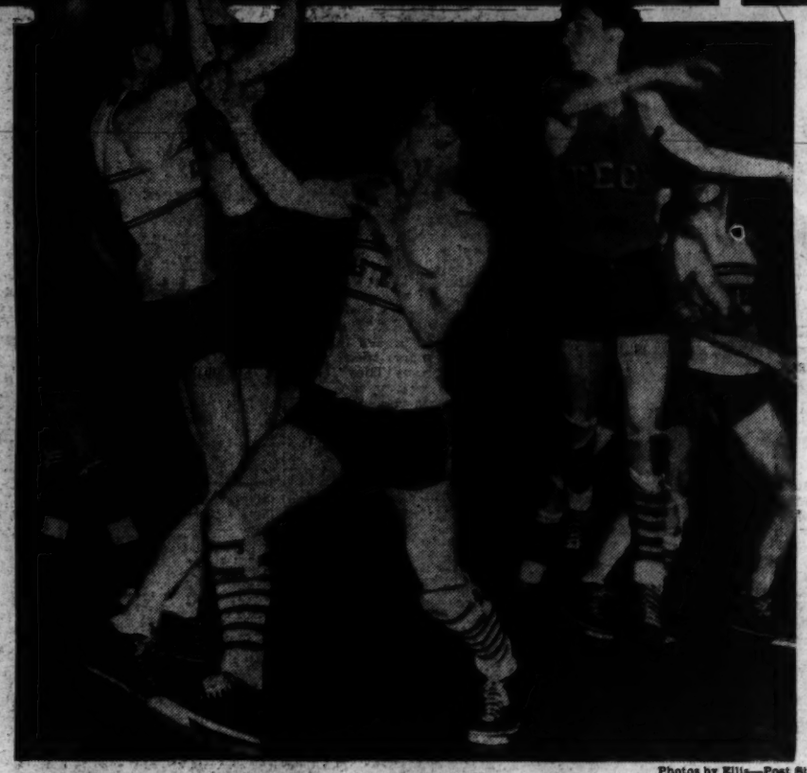
They're Off! Public High Teams Leave the Stalls for Annual Basketball Race





Photos by Ellis—Post Staff.

A smile of satisfaction creases the face of A. H. Gregory, the gentleman on the left, as he sits in the gym that he helped to get built and watches Eastern High, his favorite basketball squad, beat Tech, 31-20, in the first game of the Inter-High series. Gregory is chairman of the educational committee of the Stanton Park Citizens' Association. The upper center picture is a general view of Eastern and Tech players on the new Eastern floor. The near-capacity gathering may also be seen. Tech's loss was slightly sweetened by the fact that the pretty girls on the right cheered for it. They are (left to right) Martha Adams, Amanda Bruhner, Jeanne Kaplan and Grace Pearson. In the lower view, Moe Shulman, of Tech, tries to pass over the heads of his teammate, Charley Kendall, and Lenny "Stretch" Mills. Capt. "Soup" Hancock, in the foreground, tries to get into the scramble

E. G. Barrow Is Elected Yank Prexy

G. Ruppert Held as Vice President; 2 Lawyers, Treasurer Also Are Retained

New York, Jan. 17 (AP).—The mighty baseball empire constructed by Col. Jacob Ruppert's millions will continue virtually unchanged, with Edward G. Barrow, business manager of the club for 19 years, president of the New York Yankees.

Barrow was one of four trustees named in the colonel's will, which was read today. He will serve with George E. Ruppert, brother of the late owner and chief trustee, retaining his post as vice president, and Al Brennan holding his office as treasurer.

The two other trustees are Frederick E. Grant, long the colonel's legal adviser, and Harry C. Silleck, Ruppert's brother-in-law. Grant and Byron Clark, jr., another Ruppert lawyer, will be attorneys for the Ruppert interests in the management of the ball club.

The baseball holdings of the colonel, valued at $10,000,000, were separated in the will to insure the continuance of the Yankees. The entire will was read to members of the family, but only the status of the baseball properties was made public. Ruppert died Friday.

The baseball properties include two of the strongest minor league teams, the Kansas City Blues, of the American Association, and the Newark Bears, of the International League.

The will provides that George M. Weiss, manager of the Ruppert minor league holdings, remain in charge of the farm system.

Barrow has long been considered one of the keenest men in baseball. As a manager he handled the Boston Red Sox in the days when Babe Ruth was breaking in as a pitcher.

When Ruppert, a newcomer to baseball, found the other American League teams had been unloading wornout players on him at fancy prices he engaged Barrow as general manager. For 19 years Barrow held the job, buying, trading and assembling the players that helped the Yankees win pennants in 1921, '22, '23, '26, '27, '28, '32, '36, '37 and '38.

'Pop' Gregory Best Eastern Rooter at 76

The gray-haired, 76-year-old basketball fan sat in the bleachers and howled as lustily as any of the hundreds of high school youngsters around him. His loudest shouts, however, were heard when Eastern scored, and when the team finally had issued a 31-20 defeat to McKinley High to start off the 1939 interhigh series, there was no happier person in the stands.

For A. H. Gregory, popularly known as "Pop," had seen a dream he had cherished for many years come true. He had sat in the brand-new Eastern gymnasium which his own untiring efforts had helped to build and had seen the team of his choice—Eastern—get off to a fine basketball start.

"Pop" is no former basketball star at the East Capitol institution. Matter of fact, he never had time for sports when he was a kid. But when his son and daughter attended the school and brought home tales of exciting basketball games, "Pop" decided it was time he took an active interest in the school, and school sports particularly.

For two years he was president of the Home and School Association at Eastern, his best chance to help the school he had taken to his heart coming when he was elected to the presidency of the Stanton Park Citizens' Association. It was in this capacity that he finally worried the community into building the gym that Eastern so sorely needed.

In recognition of his valiant fight, the modern recreation center is dedicated to "Pop" Gregory. His framed photograph with an inscribed placque graces the wall of the main athletic office. A special service the kindly gentleman has performed for the past four years is the presentation of diplomas to Eastern students at graduation time. It's a duty he genuinely enjoys.

And when Eastern goes into the athletic wars, in town or elsewhere, you'll find "Pop" Gregory missing from the sidelines about as often as the coach.

Golf on His Mind, Griff Heads South

Matheny has wrestled in Washington several times.

Burman's Win Stands, Gould's Protest Filed

New York, Jan. 17 (AP).—The New York State Athletic Commission today refused to take any action on Joe Gould's request that Clarence (Red) Burman's decision over Tommy Farr in Madison Square Garden last Friday night be reversed.

Cubs' Greatest Boy Fan Dies; Stars' Friend

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Jan. 17.—Johnny English was in there swinging until the end, but he struck out.

Death came today at Mercy Hospital to the 14-year-old boy who was one of the staunchest fans of the Chicago Cubs.

He had baseball stars such as Billy Jurges and Rip Collins, of the Cubs, pulling for him, as well as Shirley Temple, the little movie actress.

John Henry Lewis Predicts Victory Over Champion

Summit, N. J., Jan. 17 (AP).—John Henry Lewis, a modest, soft-spoken Negro fighter, predicted today that he will out-point Champion Joe Louis for the world heavyweight title at Madison Square Garden a week from tomorrow night.

As Lewis sat on the rubbing table in his dressing room, he said: I suppose I should tell you fellows that I am going to knock Joe out. I suppose I should even call the round. But I won't do that, because I'm not going into the Garden to knock him out."

The king of the light-heavies explained that this will be his one-hundredth professional battle and that in his previous 99 trips through the ropes he never planned to kayo any opponent, although he did register 45 knockouts.

"I always go in with the intention of outpointing my man," he continued.

College Boys Dominate Track Team

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 17.—The extent to which colleges have displaced athletic clubs as a breeding ground for outstanding track and field performers is emphasized once again with the publication today of the 1938 All-America team selected by Daniel J. Ferris, secretary-treasurer of the National Amateur Athletic Union.

From 60 meters through 5,000, Glenn Cunningham is the only runner not of the current college crop who breaks into Ferris line-up. The amazing Kansan, as indoor and outdoor champion, naturally gets the 1,500-meter assignment.

Seventeen collegians are given 21 of the 38 berths on the all-star team, and all but one of them are national champions either indoor or out.

Four of the college stars are nominated for two events each: Ben Johnson, of Columbia, for the 60-meter and 100-meter sprints; Fred Wolcott, of Rice Institute, for the 110-meter and 200-meter hurdles; Don Lash, of Indiana, for the 5,000-meter and cross-country runs, and Irving Folwartshny, blond Rhode Island State giant, for the 35-pound weight throw and the hammer throw. Wolcott still is in school, while Johnson is teaching in New Jersey; Lash is a member of the Indiana State police force, and Folwartshny also has been graduated.

Thirteen of the college athletes, some of whom represented clubs in the National Championships but still gained their greatest fame in school, were honored doubly by being placed on the All-America and the All-College teams.

No athletes were named from the District of Columbia area.

Joe Stripp Two-Way Holdout; Wants Dodgers to Pay for 'Kids'

By the Associated Press.

Orlando, Fla., Jan. 17.—Joe Stripp waltzed into the ranks of the Brooklyn holdouts today—and cut some fancy new steps on the way.

STRIPP

In addition to the traditional squawk about salary, the veteran infielder put in a new frill by insisting the Dodgers owe him $750 for rookies he sent them two years ago and, "I won't even consider a contract until they pay me for those kids."

Van Mungo, erratic fireballer, and Fred Sington, hefty outfielder, already have placed themselves among the Dodgers' problem children by returning contracts. Mungo was angered by a robust salary slash and Sington didn't figure the terms offered him measured up to the clouting he did at the fag end of last season.

Stripp previously had hailed the opportunity to team up with Leo Durocher, new Dodger manager, for dear old Flatbush but arrival of "them papers" sent him off on a different tack.

"The contract price isn't right," he said in orthodox fashion, but insisted what really burned him was failure of the club to pay him for rookies he sent from a baseball school he operates here each spring.

"I want that money before anything else. Not that I need the dough, but it's the principle."

Shot in Wrong Basket Beats 'Corrigan's' Five

Ashland, Ky., Jan. 17 (AP).—Hobson, a forward on the Ashland Merchants team, was hailed today as the "hero" of a basketball game played with an independent team at Flatwoods in which Flatwoods won.

It happened like this:

The game was in the final quarter. Hobson had not scored a point. Finally he got a chance to beg a setup and did—in Flatwoods' goal. The "Corrigan" shot proved the deciding factor in Flatwoods' 31-29 victory.

Central and Eastern Interhigh Victors

Anacostia Loses Great Fight to Blue By 20-to-19 Score

With but ten seconds left to play, Central High School's Archie Panago stepped up to the foul line and sank a free throw that gave his mates a thrilling 20-19 victory over Anacostia yesterday, on the latter's floor, in one of the two opening games of the interhigh school championship series.

With less than a minute left to play, Harry Martin set the stage for Central's story-book finish, looping in a side shot that knotted the count at 19-all. Seconds earlier Johnny Placos' shot from midcourt sent Anacostia ahead, but Martin's field goal followed by Panago's foul clinched the honors for the Blue and White.

Apostolakos Lead Way

Until the final period it was a rather dull contest, but the boys atoned for their slow start with a whirlwind finish in the waning minutes of play. Going into the last quarter Anacostia boasted an apparently sufficient 16-8 lead, but this melted like a sailor's bank account when the Blue hit its stride.

With Apostolakos sparking the attack, Central pulled up within 4 points of its opponent, 17 to 13, and almost immediately after Martin shoved in the two baskets that tied it up at 17 to 17.

Little John Placos played a good game for Anacostia, and his all-around play was the most outstanding of both teams. Harry Martin was the spearhead of attack for the Central team. Coach Jack Ray, of Central, used two separate teams, but after the second team he had inserted failed to make a point he returned the original five to the floor, which proved to his advantage. It was a tough game for Anacostia to lose, inasmuch as it marked the team's debut in the interhigh court play, but the Indians took it with their chins up. A few more games will find them a team hard to beat.

After the intermission Anderson again opened the scoring for Anacostia, making it 14-5, the widest margin of the game; Martin's basket and Apostolakos' free toss added 3 to Central's score, but John Placos dribbled through most of the Central team to register a snowbird as the quarter ended.

Tech Bows, 31-20, To Lincoln Parkers In Shiny New Gym

By Bill Burnett.

The White Tide of Eastern High got off to a roaring start in defense of its interhigh basketball crown yesterday afternoon on the home floor, staving off a powerful rally of McKinley in the third period and whipping the tiny T-street courtmen, 31 to 20. A near capacity crowd of 1,200 watched the torrid, well played game.

After the ear-splitting noise had quieted down and the game was Eastern's, there wasn't a fan who wasn't aware of the reason for Lenny Mills' nickname—Stretch. The angular Eastern center garnered high point honors with 11 and displayed an uncanny ability to hit the loop when it was most necessary. He extended his 6-feet-plus-inches to the an almost unbelievable height to take the ball off the backboard, and scored despite the earnest guarding of Charley Kendall, Tech center, and Buddy Edwards.

Blank Is Standout

Eli Blank, veteran guard of the Manual Trainers, also played a brilliant game. In addition to scoring half his teams' points, he appeared to be back in the ball-handling form that almost brought him all-high honors last season. Moe Shulman again master-minded the loser's floor game.

The third quarter almost proved the undoing of the defending champs. Eastern went utterly scoreless, while Tech's hopefuls came within a slim two points of knotting the score. It was 20-18 as the final session got under way, but Hancock, Mills and Ralph Dassise settled the issue in short order with successive baskets. Tech's only points were single ones by Blank and Edwards in this quarter.

From the trend of affairs at the start of the game, Eastern seemed the probable winner by a 60-4 count, or thereabouts. Red-headed Howard Hancock let fly twice from near the middle of the floor, each time the ball ripping the net without touching the ring. Francis Battiste, transfer from St. John's, took up the scoring, dribbling in for two neat snowbirds.

With the score 8-0 against it, Tech finally began to click. Kendall dropped a charity toss, allowed on Les Cooksey's foul, and Blank followed it with two more, also called on Cooksey. A beautifully arched set shot by Blank brought the count to 8-5 before Eastern again tallied, Mills closing out first

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

This unpredictable world is presenting an incongruous picture of the situation among the jockeys as we go to press. Not that it is world-shaking or even important in the ordinary routine of life, but it is worth noting, perhaps.

Jockey Charlie Kurtsinger, refused further mounts on the famed War Admiral by Owner Samuel Riddle. And who should be the newest sensation among turf riders but little Donny Meade. It is enough to tax the credulity of folks who haven't glanced at a racing sheet since 1936.

Let's reconstruct briefly, the situation at that time. Donny Meade—Long Shot Donny—was banished from the race tracks for life. By dint of elaborate detective work which involved tapped wires and a host of sleuths, it was revealed that Meade was surreptitiously betting on mounts other than his own in races he was riding at Hialeah. Racing officials cracked down on Donny.

They said they were making an example of him. They not only revoked his riding license, but they denied him admission to the tracks. They cast him out of the racing picture completely. He was another good rider gone wrong. And they had reason. Betting on other horses in races he was riding was, to say the least, highly suspicious. Track betters saw their money bet on Meade's mounts "burned up," although they did not know it at the time.

Kurtsinger Was Hero

At a time when the riding career of Donny Meade was seemingly at an end, the darling of the race fans was Charley Kurtsinger. Under contract to the Riddle stable, he had the leg up on the sensational 2-year-old War Admiral. In Kurtsinger's capable hands, the son of Man o' War bettered the record of even his famed daddy.

On War Admiral as a 3-year-old in 1937, Kurtsinger continued his sensational riding. To victory in the Derby, the Preakness and the Belmont he took War Admiral, to earn the Riddle stable the prized triple crown. Not a start did War

Willard Hired by Dempsey As 'Agent of Good Will'

By the United Press.

Miami Beach, Fla., Jan. 17.—Jess Willard today gripped in friendship the right hand that battered him from the world heavyweight throne 20 years ago.

WILLARD

A bit down on his luck, Willard, the towering, former "white hope" who won the championship in 1915 from Jack Johnson, today accepted a job offered in a spirit of gratitude and helpfulness by Jack Dempsey, the man who dethroned him.

Willard will start as a "good-will ambassador" for a line of whisky that bears the "Dempsey" label—"and if he doesn't find that to his liking, I have a hundred other spots for him," Jack said, "he can always be sure of having enough to eat and a place to sleep."

Willard had little to say, but apparently was overjoyed.

Dempsey, a prosperous businessman with a dozen flourishing enterprises, refrained from calling the work Willard would do "a job." "He's going to be associated with me and he'll be his own boss and keep his own hours," Jack explained.

If Big Jess was thinking of that blazing afternoon in Toledo 20 years ago when Dempsey battered him to a bloody pulp and left him groggy on the canvas, he gave no indication of it. "Jack is a grand fellow," he said.

Balmy Spring Beats Gate and Triumphs in Hialeah Feature Race

Bradley Colt Not Headed; Pays $7.60

Sure Off Is Failure; Meade Rides 11th Winner of Meeting On Jock's Betsy

By the Associated Press.

Hialeah Park, Fla., Jan. 17.—A half-dozen eligibles for the $20,000 added, mile and a furlong Flamingo Stakes, to be decided February 23, were on display in the Normandy Isle Purse of 7 furlongs here this afternoon. One of them, Col. L. R. Bradley's Balmy Spring, beat the gate by a wide margin and never was headed, scoring easily by a length and a half in 1:24 2-5. Shady Brook Farm's Timeful, running over horses at the end, took the place by a half length, with H. P. Headley's fast working Supreme Speed third.

Balmy Spring, which now has a record of two triumphs in as many local starts, paid his backers $7.50 for $2. Others in the race named for the Flamingo but regarded as lesser light prospects were Timeful, Supreme Speed, Sure Off, Sirasia—which finished fourth—and Sky Ball.

Sure Off, recently a close second to his well-regarded stablemate, Easy Mon, went postward the favorite, with Balmy Spring second choice. Sure Off raced along in the middle of the pack and could not become a threat.

The bad start decided the event, as far as first money was concerned. Little Freddie Smith had Balmy Spring four or five lengths clear of the field before the others fairly got into stride. Supreme Speed set sail for the flying leader, but could make no impression and finally wilted in the last furlong. Timeful rushed past horses with a game late rally, too late, however, to extend the winner.

Showing totally unexpected speed, Ebony Fly, a 3-year-old filly owned by C. H. Thieriot, easily outran eight other sprinters in the first event of 6 furlongs here. The daughter of Flying Ebony, hustled to the front in a few strides by Apprentice Mose Merrill, opened up several lengths over Giboir. The latter finally tired trying to catch up. He just lasted to save the place, three lengths behind the winner and a nose before the fast-closing Fay D. Henryels Pick, the choice, lacked speed. Ebony Fly scored in 1:12 flat to return $32.70.

Jock's Betsy, a galloping winner at Tropical Park and still on the improve, was too good for the platers in the second race, another test of 6 furlongs. With Don Meade piloting his eleventh winner of the meeting and widening his lead over Eddie Arcaro, the daughter of Jock shook off Learner in the early stages.

Bill Bennings

At The Post

Hialeah Park, Jan. 17.

Dear Al:

There has been much talk hereabouts about a picture system as the best means of identifying horses. However, I string along with Alfred G. Vanderbilt, who sees branding as the real precaution against the use of "ringers." Vanderbilt already has put the stamp on his juveniles which will race this year. The numbers are put on under the hanging side of the mane and do not detract from the looks of the young horses. A fan who signs himself "Artilleryman," wrote something constructive along the branding line in the magazine The Maryland Horse and it's worth passing along. Here it is: "If and when the Jockey Club starts branding, then go to the 'Preston Brand' system now in use in the Army. It would not bother them in the least for the Jockey Club to use the same system, I should think. This system uses a brand of four symbols, three figures and one letter, in the following combinations: A000 to A999, 0A00 to 9A99, 00A0 to 99A9, 000A to 999A. This will take care of 4,000 horses. The Jockey Club last year registered 4,825, so after getting 4,000, we will have to use four figures,—thus A0000 to A9999 for the others. A real advantage of this system will be that the brand will also give the age of the horse—thus: Starting with foals of 1939, every foal of that year will have an 'A' registration number and brand! 1940 foals will have 'B' 1941 'C,' and so on. (They do not use G-I-O-Q. If an older horse is registered, he is given a registration number with the letter of the year of his foaling. Really, I believe this has merit. There might be some legal restriction on using exactly the same brand as the Army. In that case, I suggest that the Jockey Club brand be made up of five symbols, four figures and one letter, starting with A0000 to A9999 and so on to 0000A to 9999A. Then each letter would take care of 40,000 horses, but the entire number would never be used, for the next year must be the next letter." Clocker Mike went to the cleaners for $12 yesterday when both of his nags were out of the money. However, he's a glutton for punishment and will play $5 to win and $10 to place on Little Shaver. The bank roll is now $315.80.

BILL.

First race—Swift Singer received some education in that recent race and may be ready to defeat a group of this kind. I'm going to string along. Valdina Opal comes from a barn full of fit ones and could be close. Maechance to take care of the others.

Second race—Saxonia has had many chances and could slip out of the maiden ranks in this company. Gets weight off thanks to the apprentice allowance. Bounty will have Arcaro in the saddle and promises to be a keen factor. Egress for the show money.

Third race—Candy Prince looks like the right one in this spring field. Gets in light and will have the hustling F. H. Smith aboard. Cooling Spring turned in a smashing second recently and could be heard from again. Pascua will be hard to force out of the pay circle.

Fourth race—Graeme Cracker should perform well in a field of this caliber. Not a standout but has races that say he has a chance. I'm going to be there. Hi Cliff can better that recent performance. Mansco won hereabouts.

Fifth race—I'm told that Don Meade will ride Little Shaver. If he does, I look for the combination to take down the chief award. Joe Schenck is at his best and looms as the one for the top fellow to trim. Grasscutter has been rested but should go well.

Sixth race—Sun Victor was a keen one over at the Tropical Track, and the change of scenery should not dull his speed. Trina belongs with these and should be in the thick of contention. Short Distance for the minor award.

Seventh race—Continuity is in light and, despite the fact that this mile and a half may be a bit too long, I'm going to try to get this honest mare home in front. Manly and Play By Play for the place and show.

Eighth race—Crius will favor the long rounte and may get Meade for riding purposes. Black Gift and Erada for the other money positions.

Best bet—Sun Victor.

Admiral and Kurtsinger lose that year.

And early in 1938 Kurtsinger and War Admiral were off in another blaze of glory. They spread-eagled their field in the $50,000 Widener at Hialeah. As a 4-year-old, the pair seemed headed for even greater triumphs. Kurtsinger and War Admiral—they were synonymous. It was unthinkable that another jockey would have the leg up on the Riddle star.

Came the $50,000 Massachusetts Handicap in midsummer and War Admiral ran a poor fourth to Menow. They blamed it on the mud. Later came the $25,000 match race with Seabiscuit at Pimlico and War Admiral trailed by four lengths. Again there was no suspicion that Kurtsinger was at fault.

But two weeks ago, the turf world was startled to learn that Riddle had dispensed with Kurtsinger's services. The implication was plain enough and it was not denied by Riddle. He was dissatisfied with Kurtsinger's rides on War Admiral. Kurtsinger was, to put it bluntly, fired, and under a cloud.

There has been no disposition on the part of racing folks to agree with Riddle that Kurtsinger did not give War Admiral a worthy ride. The tendency has been to label Riddle as a crotchety old man who has unfairly attempted to shift the blame from horse to rider. At Suffolk, War Admiral plainly showed no liking for the mud, and at Pimlico he was simply beaten by a horse that beat the track record for the distance.

That ride by Kurtsinger on War Admiral against Seabiscuit was certainly above reproach. Riddle out-smarted himself when he insisted on the walk-up start. The Admiral might have beaten the Biscuit out of the stalls. As it was, Seabiscuit broke first and showed the best early foot. With Seabiscuit's staying qualities well known, Kurtsinger could not afford to delay a move with War Admiral. He sent him up to Seabiscuit a bit before midway in the backstretch and for a half-mile they were nose and nose. At the far turn, the better horse, Seabiscuit, drew out and the Admiral was licked, not because Kurtsinger was on his back but because he could not run as fast as Seabiscuit.

Meade's Comeback

It was quite unthinkable last summer that Kurtsinger would be fired by Riddle, but it was even more incredible to vision the disgraced Donny Meade as the hero of winter racing of 1938-39, which he is. Of a sudden, Col. E. R. Bradley, who had sponsored Meade in his apprenticeship and retained him as an exercise boy during his exile, succeeded in getting the Florida Racing Commission to lift the ban. From that day, Meade has been a sensation.

He always could ride, there was no doubt of that. As a judge of pace, he ranked with Earl Sande, Pony McAtee, Mack Garner, Johnny Maiben, Charlie Corbett and Kurtsinger. He had the knack, too, of hand-riding, and rarely punished a horse. With his performances under close scrutiny, he could be expected to put up the rides of his life.

Vanderbilt 'Did Most for Racing;' Honored by Scribes

Miami, Fla., Jan. 17 (AP).—Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, who arranged the Pimlico race between War Admiral and Seabiscuit, was named the sportsman who did the most for the turf in 1938 in the annual poll of the New York Turf Writers Association announced today.

Willis Sharpe Kilmer, of Binghamton, N. Y., who has imported thoroughbreds from abroad to improve his stock, was awarded the breeder's trophy.

Earl Sande, former jockey turned trainer, who was the year's leading money-winner in that category, was voted the trainer's plaque and Johnny Longden received top honors among the jockeys.

The trophies will be presented at the association's annual dinner at Saratoga Springs, N. Y., next August.

Bucky Harris

By Shirley Povich

Chapter Eleven

TOAST OF ALL WASHINGTON, acclaimed, feted and hailed as a miracle worker after he tacked the 1924 World Series championship onto the city's first big league pennant, 27-year-old Bucky Harris speedily demonstrated that he was no flash in the pan.

He led the Nats to a second consecutive flag in 1925. Bucky Harris laid the groundwork of that '25 championship months before the season started. In effect, he won the pennant during the December trade meeting when he engineered two of the shrewdest deals in all baseball history.

Young Bucky, for all his admiration of Walter Johnson, who in 1924 had led the league with 23 victories and seven defeats, did not dare to count on the Big Train for another such season. Johnson had twice been batted out of the box in the '24 World Series with the Giants. The Nats' manager visioned as fading the good right arm that had served the Nats so well.

He went into the winter trade meeting determined to bolster his pitching staff. And he came out of it with two old timers whose presence with the Nats earned the club the soubriquet of the Old Man's Home. He bought Stanley Coveleskie, the ancient spit-baller, from the Cleveland Indians, in exchange for a rookie outfielder named Carr Smith and a rookie submarine ball pitcher named Byron Speece. From Brooklyn, at the waiver price, he acquired the left-handed Dutch Ruether, relict of the 1919 World Series.

BASEBALL CRITICS WONDERED at Harris' moves. Both Coveleskie and Ruether were considered washed up. The suspicion was that Bucky had gone daft, that his World Series success had gone to his head. But Harris was reckoning not without logic. He knew that in Mike Martin the Washington club had a trainer who could restore a pitcher's arm if any trainer could, and he was gambling.

And at the finish of that 1925 season, Harris was entitled to boast of another miracle. Because the leading right-handed pitcher of the league was Stanley Coveleskie, and the leading left-hander of the league was Dutch Ruether.

Ruether, Coveleskie, Johnson, Zachary and Marberry—it was the dream pitching staff, and the Nats swept into an early lead in the pennant race. Goose Goslin, Joe Judge and Sam Rice again were proving themselves money players. Harris, himself, with a batting average of .287, was enjoying his best season at bat since 1921. With the spectacular Roger Peckinpaugh he again set a new record for double plays. The Nats speedily proved themselves the class of the league and young Bucky was now being hailed as a wonder manager.

Bucky Harris painfully spiked at third base as Catcher Glenn Myatt, of Tigers, steps on his hand. The injury, a week before the start of the 1925 World Series, threatened to keep Harris on the bench

On Labor Day eve the Nats held a seven-game lead over the Philadelphia Athletics, their most persistent challenger. With Al Simmons and Jimmy Foxx leading the A's attack, Connie Mack's young team was beginning to flower. It was on Labor Day at Philadelphia, in a double-header with the A's, that the Nats virtually clinched the flag. Harris, in an attempt to lengthen his lead to nine games, sent Walter Johnson and Covelskie after the double-header. In the morning game, Johnson beat a young fellow named Lefty Grove, 2 to 1, and in the afternoon Coveleskie won just as impressively. The Nats were "in."

Curley Ogden, hero of the late weeks of the 1924 campaign with the patched-up pitching arm that contributed eight straight wins to the Nats, had folded in midsummer of 1925, his arm "gone." But Fred Marberry, with his smoke ball, had stepped nobly into the breach to save game after game for the veterans who were tired in the late innings. He figured in 55 games during the season to set a new record for that type of activity.

A WEEK BEFORE THE START OF the World Series with the Pirates, Bucky, himself, was the victim of a cruel break which threatened to keep him out of the series. In a game against the Detroit Tigers at Griffith Stadium, Harris was painfully hurt during a run-down after being trapped between third and home. With a clever slide, feet first, he made it safely back to third, but Catcher Glenn Myatt, of the Tigers, who was racing Bucky to the bag, stepped on Harris' hand. Myatt was wearing new shoes and the spikes were razor-sharp. Every finger on Harris' right hand was cut virtually to the bone. He was removed from the game and it was doubtful if he would play in the World Series.

With his hand taped, Harris did go into the series against the Pirates—a series that he does not remember fondly. With Walter Johnson winning his first start, and Goose Goslin and Joe Harris pounding timely home runs, the Nats stepped into a 3-1 lead in the first four games. They needed only to win the fifth game in Washington to clinch their second consecutive championship.

Stanley Coveleskie was Harris' pitching choice for that fifth game, and it was a choice that found Bucky with misgivings. Coveleskie, finally breaking down from the strain of the pennant race, went into that game with his aged back strapped and taped. Only because Covey pleaded so strongly for the chance did Harris give him the job.

Ordinarily, Bucky would have used Frank Marberry in that fifth game in an attempt to clinch the series. But Marberry was now useless to the Nats. In the fourth game he had done a yeoman piece of work in relieving Alec Ferguson and getting one batter out. Harris sent big Fred into the game to relieve Fergy with two Pirates on bases and the dangerous Pie Traynor at bat. Ferguson's first three pitches to Traynor had been balls.

Calling Marberry in, Harris went to the mound to talk to him. "Fred, ya gotta get this first pitch over," he said. Marberry wound up, literally poured the ball down the middle, Traynor taking it as the first strike. Again Harris strode to the pitcher's box. "Traynor may not take this one, Fred," he said, "he'll probably try to hit the cripple. Ya gotta get it down the middle, but ya gotta blow it past him." Again Marberry reared back, wound up and cut loose with his bullet. Traynor took it. It was three balls, two strikes. Harris trotted in to the mound again to give Marberry a reassuring slap on the back. "Give it all you've got this time, Fred. But make sure it's over," he pleaded.

MARBERRY NODDED, WENT BACK to his task. He reared back and fogged the ball toward the plate. Traynor swung, missed and was a strike-out victim. But Marberry was through, too. Something in his arm had snapped. He never pitched another ball in that World Series.

The Pirates beat Coveleskie in that fifth game, and at Pittsburgh they won the sixth to tie the series at 3-3. On the cold, rain-swept afternoon of the seventh game at Forbes Field, Walter Johnson was Harris' pitching choice. The series appeared won by the Nats when they staked Johnson to a 4-1 lead. But Roger Peckinpaugh, on his way to setting a new World Series record with eight errors, booted two more. On the muddy, treacherous mound, Johnson could not gain a footing for his pitches. There were wild rumors that Peck, with his errors, was "sloughing" the series. But with the score tied at 6-6, the veteran shortstop proved his honesty, if it needed proving. He hit a home run to put the Nats in the lead.

But Johnson was wavering. The Pirates came up with three runs in the eighth inning, won the game, 9 to 7, and sent a wet-eyed Bucky Harris back to Washington.

Arena Cuts Fight Prices, to Feature Local Talent

Ahearn Done With 'Name' Attractions

Archibald-Mazza Fiasco Followed by Drastic New Plan

In the wake of the Archibald-Mazza fiasco which converted 700 fans into a booing, protesting mob, Promoter Joe Turner and Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn announced in a joint statement yesterday that:

1. Champions and near-champions from other cities are definitely out as Arena attractions.

2. Local talent will be featured on Arena programs.

3. Prices of admission will be drastically cut.

Matchmaker Ahearn, deeply apologetic for the Archibald-Mazza affair, which saw the inept Mazza fall sadly as an opponent for the Providence clouter, declared it would be his last venture involving "name" fighters.

"It is too big a gamble," said Ahearn. "That kind of a fight sours the public on my cards. When the champions come in here they want to pick their spots. I'm through with them. From now on, it's going to be local fighters."

Ahearn surveyed the local fight situation with a view to presenting a program next week featuring Washington fighters. He is leaning toward a bout between Bobby Wilson, blond middleweight who is making a comeback, and Phill Furr, former Washington favorite, who has been campaigning in New York.

The limited capacity of the Arena which seats only 1,800 fans makes it impossible to book big name fighters against worthy opponents, explained Ahearn. "I can't give them big guarantees, and on a percentage they won't draw enough."

A 50 per cent reduction in prices were announced by Turner and Ahearn for all future Arena shows. Ringside seats which formerly sold at $2.30 will be sold at $1.15 and the general admissions, formerly $1.15, have been reduced to 60 cents.

It is the same plan that Turner followed with his wrestling, which showed a marked increase in attendance when admission prices were slashed. Drastic reduction in prices has also revived boxing in Baltimore, which for several years was in a depression.

Ahearn announced also the cancellation of the Leo Rodak-Joe Silva bout, arranged for next week, in line with his new policy. Rodak, N. B. A. featherweight champion, was to meet in Silva, a lad who was decisively beaten on Monday by Lou Ambers.

G. U. Riflemen Face 3 Shoots

The Georgetown rifle squad faces a week-end of busy action in New York City, where it will compete in three meets over Friday and Saturday.

The Sixty-ninth Regiment Tournament is the outgrowth of a rivalry between the soldiers and Georgetown. The Sixty-ninth is the only Catholic regiment in Gotham. Also a former regiment shooter, Tom Lewis, now captains the Georgetown team.

Sergt. Ernest Alexander, coach of the Hoyas, will take an eight-man squad on the trip, including Lewis, Vic Wales, Ray van Wagner, jr., James Whatton, Sydney Lawrence, Jack Snyder, Judson Armstrong and Ed Kurdziel.

Bibber McCoy Back at Arena

The three-month ban placed on Bibber McCoy's appearance on Joe Turner's W-Street wrestling mat, will be lifted tomorrow when the villainous matman comes to town to do battle with Tommy O'Toole in the feature of the weekly wrestling show. It will be a 90-minute time limit affair, the last bout on the regular bargain bill.

Though McCoy wears no mask and does his best work in regular wrestling trunks, there are certain fans who insist that he is a worse villain than the Golden Terror, current toast of the rassle-minded populace. He is a former gridiron performer with Holy Cross and Mount St. Mary's, a fact that many believe led to his rough tactics.

'Unofficial' College Park Club Goes Official

Maryland U. Boy Problem Ends Happily

It's the youngest class in the University of Maryland's history, but Prof. Roy Mackert, who thought of the idea and introduced it on the campus, believes the College Park Boys Club is going to be a rousing success.

Mackert and his men have them from 6 years of age and up, from the first grade to the ninth, and they meet once a week in the gym-armory "on the hill." At first glance it resembles the abode of the "Old Lady in the Shoe" fable, but at second glance you discover it actually is an orderly boys' club with most of the trimmings.

A request from the principal of the College Park Grammar School, a Mrs. Holmes, for assistance in staging a spring track meet for the boys caused Mackert to give the problem some serious consideration. There also was a small, energetic matter identified as Roy Mackert, jr., that needed attention.

Master Mackert, it seems, belonged to the highly unofficial "College Park A. C." which clogged up the passageways at every Maryland sporting event "crashing" the gate, and even slowed up proceedings at intramural contests. Fraternity basketball games were continually being delayed while the players untangled the College Park A. C. members from their legs and pulled them out of their hair. It was rather disheartening to the frat boys, whose game is somewhat mediocre without outside interference.

Prof. Mackert, who runs the physical education department, sat down to mull over the matter and thought up a compromise. Why not, he reasoned, turn the premises over to the youngsters one night each week in return for a pledge of good behavior the other five nights in the week.

Wilson Five Defeats Md. State, 25-20

For the first time in years, the Wilson Teachers turned back the basketball representatives of Maryland State Teachers College in a battle here last night. The final count was 25 to 20.

Gordon and Clark, the latter an all-high performer with Central two years ago, led the local teachers to victory. Gordon sank six field goals and his running mate hit the rims for five. Gilliam played a potent defensive game for the winners. B. Cox and Brill did the bulk of the counting for the visitors.

The first half was evenly played with Wilson holding an 11-10 advantage. In the second half Wilson pulled away gradually.

The victory was the second in six starts for Wilson which plays host to the Towson five tonight. Saturday night Gallaudet entertains the Teachers.

Jewish Community Center Boasts Modern Health Club

With Ed Rosenblum, executive director, acting as host, a group of Washington sports writers last night made a tour of inspection of the new Jewish Community Center, with particular reference to the health club and athletic equipment.

The unit is ultra-modern in every detail. They have the equipment to wear the average citizen to the well known frazzle, and more to restore him to a state of normalcy. You can swing dumbbells, ride electrical horses or have yourself whipped into a fine frenzy on a belt machine.

A hot room, for drying out, steam room, showers, massaging tables, ultra-violet lamps, honest-to-goodness beds—with two sheets, blanket and pillow, and saltwater bath are a few other items. Four handball courts, perfect in every detail, a squash-racquets court, and a sundry assortment of offices round out the building. All of which is added to the swimming pool and gymnasiums the Center has boasted since its foundation.

Jim McNamara is in charge of the health club, and Prof. Edwart Beckert, formerly of the Y. M. C. A., is in charge of the physical education department.

Galento Is Odd Piece in Ring's Heavyweight Jigsaw Puzzle

Nova, Baer Probably Will Meet, Winner To Get Louis

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 17.—The heavyweight championship jig-saw puzzle, as now being put together, hasn't altogether met with the approval of some of the writing boys.

They can't quite figure out why madcap Maxie Baer, who hasn't fought for two years, and Lou Nova, who's still somewhat of a green hand at this fisticuffing business, should be paired for a coveted shot at Joe Louis, while of 2-ton Tony Galento is left out in the cold.

The Galento cheering and chowder society contends Tony's candidacy is based on his fighting during last year. A year in which he also spent several weeks battling pneumonia. While Madcap Maxie was training to be a cowboy in the movies, Tony was campaigning up and down the fistic front picking up all the loose change around as well as the victories.

There has been talk that Tony

may mix clouts with Nova February 24, but in light of the fact that Promoter Mike Jacobs has hinted the Baer-Nova winner would get Louis, this seems hard to figure out, like the fellow who splashes ketchup on his pancakes for taste. Tony is too famous for upsetting apple-carts.

Stock Holders Of Radio Corp. To Pick Auditors

New York, Jan. 17 (AP).—The board of directors of Radio Corporation of America has adopted amended by-laws under which stockholders at each annual meeting will appoint independent public accountants to audit and certify the company's annual financial statement, it was learned today.

Radio Corporation is believed to be the first large company summarily to delegate to the shareholders—the owners of the company—the direct power of choosing auditors, since the McKesson & Robbins receivership directed attention to accounting methods.

Since the sudden filing early in December of a bankruptcy petition by the $87,000,000 McKesson & Robbins drug firm, and subsequent discovery of a deficiency of $18,000,000 in assets, despite periodic audits by independent accountants, methods to improve corporate and accounting practices has been a chief topic of discussion among corporation executives.

Cleveland Drug Co. Is Under Double Probe

SEC and State Inquiry President, Deposed and Reinstated, Is Accused

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Jan. 17.—State and Federal securities investigators stepped into affairs of the Mutual Drug Co., a Cleveland wholesale house, today. Almost simultaneously, stockholders voted to shave $600,000 off the company's capitalization, and one stockholder sought to throw the company into receivership on the ground that it had paid $1,000,000 in dividends out of capital stock in the last nine years.

Ohio's securities division ordered the company to cease issuing $25 ...tificates to druggists. These certificates, the State said, entitled druggists to buy goods at discount and to participate in mutual's profits. Their sale was barred because they had not been registered as securities, Paul Selby, securities division chief, said.

20 Subpenas Served

At least 20 Federal Securities and Exchange Commission subpenas were served on officers and directors of the company, calling upon them to appear for an examination tomorrow. The stockholders, in a special meeting, voted to write down to $5 the company's $7.50 preferred stock. This represented a reduction in capital from $1,834,222 to $1,223,315.

Terance Scullin, an east Cleveland stockholder, filed the receivership suit. It charged that Frederick T. Roosa, for 29 years Mutual's president, had operated the company for his own benefit, concealed its true condition and misled stockholders by maintaining assets at inflated values.

Roosa was reinstated by Mutual's directors yesterday. He had been replaced as president December 30 by L. L. Van Schaack, of Chicago. One director said a misunderstanding led to the December 30 action, and Roosa said a difference of opinion over a proposed bond issue was at fault.

Rally in Utilities Checks Decline; Upturn Comes in Last Hour of Trading U. S. Government Bonds Continue Gains

New York, Jan. 17.—Downward tendencies in stock prices which had been in evidence for some days, were halted today when the securities markets staged a mild rally under leadership of utilities. Rail equipments and a few of the motors and blue-chip manufacturing issues took their cut from the power division with moderate gains. Coppers, however, continued to sag and stores eased fractionally. Other divisions jogged along at about the same levels as on Monday. Dealings on the big board totaled 823,730 shares. The composite for the 100 key stocks on the big board ended 0.25 point ahead.

The upturn in stocks occurred largely in the last hour of trading, when utilities were given a whirl on the theory that outlook for the industry was materially improved, largely because Congress is in a mood to curtail Federal expenditures for power development, and because the Administration has intimated it will relax its campaign against privately owned power.

Rail Shares Steady

Railroad shares were steadied by a favorable car loadings report and by improved earnings of Class 1 roads. Buying was at a fair rate in aviations and numerous special issues in all groups, notably preferred stocks, were in request by investment buyers. Electrical equipments were inclined to follow the utilities. Steels rallied after early losses, then ranged to more than a point in Bethlehem.

Power stocks predominated in the day's list of most active stocks, with low priced shares the most popular, even at the rising quotations. Motors were the next in activity. Some of the more important individual gains included additions of a point or more for American Telephone, Commonwealth & Southern preferred, Commonwealth-Edison, Johns-Manville, Public Service of New Jersey and Western Electric. Of 724 issues traded, 371 were higher, 175 lower and 178 unchanged.

Action of the rail stocks received favorable comment from several of the brokerage houses. It is pointed out that much of the buying in this group is based more on anticipation of an extension of the industrial recovery rather than in the possibility of Federal aid for the carriers. Earnings of the roads in the fourth quarter and at present are at such levels as to justify a measure of optimism in spite of the indisputably high operating costs, according to analysts who admit, however, the ultimate necessity of steps to re-establish a proper relationship between operating expense and revenues.

Congress

While Wall Street generally approves the independent attitude assumed by the new Congress, speculative and perhaps investment groups are restrained by an inclination to await more definite results in the form of reduced Government appropriations and modification or repeal of legislation harmful to business. There are a number of large questions to be settled at Washington in the next few months, it is agreed. A leading credit executive enumerates these issues as follows: Will Congress check our spending and reverse our deficit policy? keep our armament policy within reason? courageously put forward a farm program that is not a camouflage? Insist on more fairness and equity in labor legislation? make tax laws more economic and equitable? check bureaucratic tendencies? keep social security within some limitations?

Treasury Issues in Demand

Listed bond dealings remained dull today, but the trend was cheerful. United States Treasury issues added fresh gains on top of those previously recorded, and the small fractional improvement occasioned highs in eight issues. Best grade corporate issues were well maintained, while most issues in the speculative classificiations managed to move forward. Foreign dollar issues reflected modest inquiry. Total turnover was $5,690,000.

Long term United States Treasury issues moved up 1/32 to 4/32 point in a quiet market. Dealers and institutional investors decided there was no use "reaching" for bonds in the thin market, and trading was kept to small levels largely for that reason. Guaranteed bonds of the Farm and Home Corporation were similarly idle and firm. Best rated utility, railroad and industrial bonds tended to advance by small fractions.

Speculative railroad bonds developed mild strength, with the better rated securities taken up by investors to some degree. The fact that Congress actually has a bill to improve the carrier situation added to the buying interest. Default rails were neglected. Holding company bonds were unchanged, but some of the industrial convertibles advanced. Local traction bonds were irregular, and communications issues drifted lower.

Latin-American default bonds were in resumed demand, but only on a modest basis. Panama issues did better than others. German and other European default bonds were dull. The intermediate group, represented by Czech, Italian and Japanese bonds, showed some irregularity. Best grade foreigns of Australian, Canadian and Scandinavian origin merely held to previous levels.

Utility to Spend $33,000,000 For Construction

New York, Jan. 17 (AP).—A $33,000,000 construction budget for 1939 was outlined today by Commonwealth & Southern Corporation, a leading utility system. The total is about the same as the outlay in 1938 for capital expenditures.

The bulk of the money was planned for new generating capacity and distribution facilities in the northern operating properties, mostly in Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan and Illinois.

About $9,000,000, it was said, was allotted for the Southern properties, which have held down capital expenditures in recent years because of the expansion of TVA.

Out of $19,000,000 assigned for distribution facilities this year, rural line extensions were down for $5,200,000.

A. B. A. Convention To Be Held in Seattle

New York, Jan. 17 (AP).—This year's annual convention of the American Bankers Association will be held at Seattle, Wash., September 25-28, Philip A. Benson, of Brooklyn, president, announced today.

Cotton Steady; Trading Narrow

New York, Jan. 17 (AP).—Cotton sagged a little then recovered for small net gains in a slow trade today. Covering by professional operators and a moderate trade demand accounted for the final improvement of 2 to 4 points. Trading sentiment leaned a little more toward the bullish side with the late upturn in the stock market and on reports of a more active inquiry for cotton goods in Worth street.

Continuing as a restrictive influence on trading, however, was the somewhat confusing situation in Washington in connection with the still undisclosed plans for administering the farm program this year.

Cottonseed oil futures again dropped to new lows for the season in a broad trade today. Minor rallies failed to hold and final losses of 8 to 9 points were the bottom for the day. Anaconda Closes One of Its Mines

New York, Jan. 17 (AP).—Brakes were applied today to domestic copper production as the mining industry sought to avoid a renewed accumulation of unsold metal.

The Anaconda Copper Mining Co. announced suspension of operations at its Leonard mine in Butte, Mont., involving 950 workers. Mining circles watched to see whether other domestic producers would follow Anaconda in curtailing.

Big Harvests Give Farmers More Money

Study of 60 Years Shows Curtailment Does Not Increase Incomes

New York, Jan. 17.—The old saying, "You've got to have hens, if you want eggs," was given a new twist in the report just released by the economic research division of the conference board, showing that farmers usually make more money when their harvests are large than when crops are curtailed.

A study of agricultural statistics in the United States over the last 60 or 70 years indicates that farmers' incomes are certainly not raised by reduced crops. In years of big harvests of wheat, cotton and tobacco, the three major commodities examined, farmers usually have had fatter pocketbooks than in years of poor harvests.

Wheat, for example, is a product which we sell in large quantities to other countries, and the American price depends on the world market. Prices in this world market are dependent on the total world crop and carryover, which is only partly affected by the American situation. Because our farmers sell their wheat at the world price, it is logical that they should make more money when they have more to sell—large crops instead of reduced crops.

In the case of cotton, American production has dominated the world market and tended to set the world price. Demand for cotton, too, depends on general industrial conditions. With these and other qualifications carefully weighed, the conference board study of production and total farm value of our cotton crops from 1876 to 1936 shows that a small crop tends to bring farmers less money, while a large crop usually increases their income.

Similar evidence for tobacco on the basis of both acreage and crop indicates that one can't increase the value of the tobacco crop by reducing acreage. Prices for tobacco may go up, but farmers still make less money from smaller-than-average crops.

Giannini Probe Pushed Despite SEC Setback

Court to Rule Monday On Rogge's Demand to Inspect Bank's Records

The Securities and Exchange Commission will proceed today with its stock delisting action against Transamerica Corporation, holding company for the Giannini group of banks, as a result of an understanding in court yesterday deferring temporarily commission efforts to delve into Bank of America records.

Resuming its hearing, the commission will call W. L. Andrews, treasurer of Transamerica, for questioning regarding the financial structure of the huge holding company.

John O. Rogge, chief of SEC counsel, announced that, notwithstanding the delay in gaining access to Bank of America records, the commission "will go ahead just as far and as thoroughly as we can."

Rogge and Donald R. Richberg, former National Recovery Administration head and chief counsel for the Giannini interests, arrived at an understanding yesterday before Justice Jennings Bailey in the District Supreme Court confining the hearing, for the present, to matters affecting Transamerica.

A hearing on the request for an injunction will be held before Justice Bailey Monday.

Through examination of Andrews, commission attorneys expect to develop piece by piece a picture of the Transamerica set-up as well as the details of its history and major past transactions involving it and predecessor companies.

The injunction suit on behalf of Bank of America admittedly may result in a protracted legal battle which will be taken to the United States Supreme Court for decision of the question whether the SEC is entitled to records of national banks. Richberg contends banking laws restricts such records to the confidential use of specific agencies, which do not include the SEC.

London, Jan. 17.—Unsettled continental political conditions caused an easier tendency in the stock market today and prices closed generally lower. The British giltedged group continued heavy. South African selling depressed mining shares while home rails, industrials and oils remained quiet. Transatlantics finished fractions to two points down and European bonds were lower.

Paris—The bourse closed weak in quiet trading today. Bank of France lost almost 300 francs and the international group was in supply. Suez Canal dipped 150 francs and Royal Dutch 100. Rentes finished 1 to almost 3 francs down.

Liverpool—Price movements were irregular in cotton futures trading today. Liquidation and selling of Egyptian cotton was absorbed by the trade. Final prices were one point higher to two lower. Wheat futures closed ¼d lower to ⅛d up. Cash demand continued limited. European crop and weather reports were mixed, but tended to the favorable side.

News of Capital Night Clubs

By Mary Harris.

ROOSEVELT GLIDE: Elliott Roosevelt was among ringsiders enjoying the debut of the "Eleanor Glide" in Shoreham's Blue Room on Monday eve. Elliott smiled like both his mama and his papa but didn't get up to join the "E. Gliders."

The "Eleanor Glide" was a great success. It's prettier, gayer, a bit more complicated that the "Lambeth," but still easy to do. Barnes led off the Eleanor-ing in company with Dancing Teacher Ethel Fristere and eight of her teachers. In no time the floor was crowded with gliders.

N. B.: The beautiful blonde in the tall blue hat who was Barnee's second gliding partner was Josephine Huston, soprano star at the Capitol Theater.

VOICE FROM VENEZUELA: Mario di Polo has installed a huge radio in back of the Pall Mall Room so that he'll be sure to catch the soprano soloing of his lovely wife, Fedora di Polo, the "Venezuelan Nightingale." Mme. di Polo is now en route to Caracas, Venezuelan capital.

BEWITCHED LARCENY: It was wrong, of course, but could it be helped? Was it a crime? Or just an inevitable result? Those are the thoughts that pour through the mind when Cafe Caprice reports that two of Singer Peggy Townsend's portraits have been stolen from lobby displays.—Suggestion to Manager Daniel Wathey of the Roger Smith: Hang that last picture of Peggy's about 10 feet from the floor, and hook it up with a burglar alarm.

JITTER-BOYS: These Red Jackets (picture above), who will start swinging at Hi Hat today, are about the steamiest set of young jitterjivers who've ever come to town. No wakes over "Ol' Man Mose" for this crew. They disinter old Mose and invite him to go crazy along with them—and everyone else within hearing. Duane Hogle is the head Red Jacket and tries to control "Chuck" Palmer, singer and clarinet-teaser; "Butch" Brush, cow' boy yodeler; Ken Fisher, bass thumper.

RINGSIDE MOVIES: At Lounge Riviera: Dr. and Mrs. George Dewey entertaining a party of 20 in honor of his birthday. The doctor still looked a bit astonished, since he'd had the impression he was to meet Mrs. Dewey for cocktails and a quiet tete-a-tete dinner . . . In the Mayflower Lounge: Lord and Lady Layton dancing to Sidney's music, just before leaving for New York. Also the Hon. Edward Astley, eldest son of Lord Hastings, who visited here for a week before leaving for the Bahamas . . . In Shoreham's

The Red Jackets, the Hi Hat's new jitter boys who make their Washington bow today. Inset—Connie Randall, who sings with the Barnee-directed orchestra in the Shoreham Blue Room

Blue Room: Representative Thomas H. Cullen, oldest member of the House and father of that famed "Bring Back Beer" legislation.

METRONOME INTO STUDIO: You can combine dancing with a visit to a broadcasting studio by tripping up to Metronome tonight. Paul Kain and his orchestra will present one of their coast-to-coast broadcasts between 10 and 10:30, with noted announcers, technicians and radio executives all on hand. Kain fans from New York to San Francisco have been writing in asking for favorite tunes. It should be a grand party.

PAUL KAIN

FAN MAH BROW! Lotus patrons are literally collapsing in laughter at the take-off of Sally Rand's fan dance being done by Danny Grayson. Not fans, but plain newspapers (plus a lot of ideas) are used by Danny. Another killer-diller is the version of "You Must Have Been a Beautiful Baby" being done by singer Eve Lane and emcee "Tiny" Meeker. Feverish dancing is supplied by tap-toe stepper Helen Lake and the rumba fox trot of Marrone and Gallo.

MARION PLUS MARTHA: Whenever Mayfair's promotion manager Jimmy Byrd has a half hour to spare this week he goes next door to the Earle to hear Marion Mann sing "Martha." Not because of "Martha," but because Jimmy and Marion were friends long before she became a singing star.

PERFECTION: Jean Foreman (dancing with Lou Spencer at Bamboo Gardens) was named by artist James Montgomery Flagg as the most perfectly formed girl he'd ever seen.

NEW FACE: Buddy Phillips, personable young singer in the Bing Crosby manner, who has joined canary Libby Frazier and pianist Howard Tophan in the Uptown cocktail lounge.

MELODIES HYPNOTIC: The Biltmore Boys' (Shar-Zad) theme song, "My Foolish Love." It was written by Leader Don Taylor, who says shyly, "Anything I write always turns out to be a torch song."

"Lights Out," the Billy Hill cowboy tune, as lilted low by Lyde Swygert in the Hamilton Hotel's Rainbow Room.

The extra-haunt quality which Matt Windsor's (Anchor Room) accordion gives to that naturally too-haunting "Memories."

"Deep in a Dream," wherein Mary La Marre and Johnny Shaw's Madrillon orchestra go off the deep end into romantic rhythm.

"Bells of Moscow," bassoed gloriously by Vladimar Deloff at Troika.

SEE YOU AT FIVE: Today at Hour Glass' style parade of cruise togs and bathing suits. Supposing that you can manage to get in, or getting in, can find a table.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

"What would be the proper response to a two-spade bid holding this hand?" asks M. G.

♠ None
♡ K J 10 7 6
◇ Q 10 9 6
♣ Q 10 9 8

"I bid thre hearts, my partner said four hearts, I raised to six and he went on to seven. Here is his hand:

♠ A K J 10 9
♡ A 9 8
◇ None
♣ A K 6 3 2

"Don't you think he should have bid his clubs first? I made the contract, but was criticized for bidding three hearts instead of two no-trump."

The bidding was good. The original bidder might have shown his club suit before raising hearts—clubs is a better declaration but the near finesse will have to be guessed right at either contract if seven is to be made.

We do not agree that the two bidder should have mentioned his clubs before spades; he opened correctly. Under normal circumstances when two suits of equal length are held the higher ranking suit is bid first.

In his second question M. G. asks whether or not he should rescue his partner whose overcall has been doubled.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 ♣	1 ◇	1 ♡	Pass
2 ♣	2 ◇	Dbl.	?

South's hand:

♠ K 10 8 3
♡ J 10 9 8
◇ None
♣ Q J 8 4 2

South's hand:

"Should I pass or should I say two no-trump?" asks M. G.

Inasmuch as South and his partner are in a tight spot and are probably going to take a bad licking anyway, he might just as well attempt to rescue, first bidding two spades and flitting to two no-trump if the double sounds too loud. There is always the hope, however faint, that the adversaries will forget to double two spades.

A pass may be expensive but it will leave South a blameless martyr.

After reviewing the boners of ordinary players, it is refreshing to reflect that experts can commit horrors too. Witness the hand in today's box on which Charles Goren, expert, 1937 winner of the league's master point award, author and lecturer, went set five tricks at a three no-trump contract.

You will admit that the contract was fairly logical but what has been bothering us is how he could have been set five tricks.

The details related by that bid are a little incomplete. Here is what Hawkshaw W. Howard Woolworth says:

"North opened the three of hearts to the ace in the South hand. South returned the heart jack to the king in the closed hand. West made the one play to make the contract by laying down the ace and king of spades, hoping to catch the queen doubleton. West cashed the diamond ace at the end as three no-trump was defeated five tricks!"

But what became of the clubs?

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

THUMBNAIL size-ups of prominent ones at the Monday night meeting opening National Civil Service Week:

Representative Robert Ramspeck, coldly serious; Senator David I. Walsh, emotional; Civil Service Commissioner Samuel H. Ordway, poised; Civil Service President Harry B. Mitchell, patient; A. F. G. E. President Charles I. Stengle, beaming; Representative Jennings Randolph, enthusiastic; the newspaper photographers, bored; Ellen Maki, "Miss Civil Service"; just glad.

THE Order of Three Stars, the highest Latvian civil award, has come to Miss Gertrude L. Warren, of the Extension Service, Agriculture Department, because she fostered friendly relations between the United States and Latvia in the field of 4-H Club work. Miss Warren, a quiet-faced woman, has served the Extension Service for 22 years, specializing in 4-H activities. She was reared in New York State; was graduated from Columbia University and before coming to the Federal service taught in Columbia's teachers college and in Simmons College. She is the author of several Government publications and magazine articles relating to 4-H Club work.

MISS WARREN

WRITE this in the long history of the Postoffice Department:

They opened bids for an autogyro mail service in the office of the First Assistant Postmaster General yesterday. And this impresses us because of the far cry from the days of the stagecoach mail and the pony express. It intrigues because the plan is to take on the mails at the Camden Airport, across the river from Philadelphia, and unload it on the roof of the Philadelphia Postoffice. This saves the time of driving mail through Philadelphia traffic. It's a matter of only a few minutes. It's the first venture of the Postoffice in autogyroing; it may be extended upon elsewhere. A couple of years ago you may have seen Mr. Farley, in the newsreels, taking off in an autogyro full of mail. That was only a stunt—leading up to what occurred in the department yesterday with the opening of the bids.

RECENT OFF-BASE: when it was said the 35 employes in the cost accounting section, FSA, are in danger of dismissal before they get civil service status. The fact is, their tenure is indefinite—which is bad enough.

THE other day this column remarked on the number of people who come to Washington looking for Federal jobs and, not finding one on every bush, are told to try the civil service but recoil from the notion for reasons satisfactory to themselves. Taking the cue from the article, James C. O'Brien, of the commission staff, yesterday morning had this to say on the radio:

"Any individual's opportunities for civil service employment depend in a large measure on his qualifications. Thec omission holds examinations annually for more than 1,500 different positions, and any individual's prospects for appointment to a civil service position, must, in the final anlysis, depend upon the activity in the field in which he is most qualified.

"My advice to any individual who is interested in civil service employment would be to request the Civil Service Commission to place his name on file for notification of the announcement of the next examination along the line in which he may indicate that he is qualified. When the examination is announced, he can then file application and his prospect for appointment will, of course, depend upon his rating in the examination and the needs of the service in the particular field in which he is examined."

NOTES: West Virginians in Washington dance tomorrow night at the Raleigh Hotel with their Congressional delegation as honor guests. The reception starts at 9:30, the dancing at 10 . . . Also tomorrow night, many employes and trade union groups will meet in the North Interior Auditorium to protest WPA guillotining. The U. F. W. A. sponsors the gathering and Representative Ramspeck, Lee Pressman and others will speak.

Bob Burns Says—

Us humans—we spend millions of dollars every year jes' for things that smell. Flowers an' perfumes an' such. Our poor noses is sniffin' at somethin' all the time. Sometimes it's foods like ham an' eggs, or cheeses, or exhaust from somebody's automobile, or smoke from a dyin' cigar—well, you could jes' go on an' on, addin' whiff after whiff of this an' that. But, ladies and gentlemen of this readin' audience, you ain't smelled nothin' unless you've inhaled a load of the Amorphophallus titanum. This is the smell to end smells.

It's a plant they've got in captivity in the New York Botanic Gardens—an' every tme it blooms, you wonder what's wrong with the world. You knew the world didn't smell so good where there was hatred an' persecution but you never found a flower that could express this smell until now. So, while we're "sayin' it with flowers," let's give Amorphophallus titanum a chance to tell certain humans what it thinks of 'em! You can bet they'll never open their mouths to talk back!

Bedtime Story

By Thornton W. Burgess.

The Bravest Deed

The bravest folk are those afraid
Who by their fear are undismayed.
—Old Mother Nature.

"Yes," said the Captain, a far away look in his eyes, "on the battlefields of France I saw many brave deeds, but I still think that nothing I saw there was braver than, and perhaps nothing as brave as, what a little mother Meadow Mouse did in my tent last summer. To my way of thinking it called for the very highest type of courage. You may not agree with me, but that is the way I feel personally.

"But you haven't told us what she did more than to live under the floor of your tent while you were in camp with the National Guard last summer, and I don't call that being brave. What did she do that was really brave?" said Sammy a bit impatiently.

The Captain's eyes twinkled. "I'm coming to that, but first let us go back a little," said he. "I told you that I knew nothing of her until the floor of my tent was torn up the day we broke camp. Then we saw her running for her life. One of the men struck at her with his hammer and another threw his hammer at her. Both missed, but consider how terrified that little animal must have been with these tremendous giants trying to kill her, to say nothing of the noise and confusion all about her.

"Then Zip, my dog, dug up her nest with several absolutely helpless babies in it. As I told you I put back the babies that had been tumbled out of the nest and covered them with dry grass. I ordered Zip not to touch them again and with a sigh he laid down beside the nest and went to sleep or pretended to. My thought was that possibly those baby Mice would live until the camp was abandoned and that their mother might then return to them, although I had little hope that they would survive or that she would return if they did.

"I had a number of visitors in my tent. They came and went. Each one I warned not to step on the nest. And Zip continued to snooze right along side of it. This went on for a couple of hours. Then I looked to see how the babies were. There was just one left in the nest and that was one that had been killed when Zip dug up the nest. That little mother had carried the others away to a new and I hope safer home.

"Now just consider what that means. It means that in broad daylight, with me sitting within 5 feet of that nest and Zip lying right beside it, with tremendous giants, for to a Mouse human beings can be nothing less, going and coming both inside and outside the tent, she had made trip after trip and carried those babies off one by one.

"All the time she must have been filled with terror. Naturally timid, she had had the added fright of having two of those giants try to kill her. Despite all this she had made not one trip but several trips back into the very heart of the enemy's stronghold to rescue her babies. She was only a mother of Mice, but in that camp full of soldiers she had a heart as brave as the bravest of them. Now what do you think?"

"I think," said Sue slowly, "that I never have heard of a braver deed. I see what you mean when you say that the bravest people are those who are most afraid yet go ahead and do brave deeds. I never expected to admire a Mouse, but I do that one. You—you didn't make up any of that story?"

"No, I didn't make up any of that story, my dear. It is all true and happened just as I have told it," replied the Captain.

Minority Pulls Fast One on Democrats At Union Election

A hurry call for sackcloth and ashes was sent out by the Democratic majority in the Senate yesterday—for the Republicans had pulled a fast one, and what was worse, it was the Republicans of the House.

A youthful and vigorous Republican minority suddenly descended like the locust upon the annual meeting of the American section of the Interparliamentary Union, dethroned its president, Senator Barkley, of Kentucky, and elevated to the lofty office Representative Fish, New York Republican.

$10,000 Yearly Junket

Aside from the honor, the presidential robes include within their ample folds the right to invite members of Congress to help spend a $10,000 appropriation annually voted to pay the expenses of the American delegation to the yearly meeting of the union, usually held in some exotic capital such as Budapest (1936), Istanbul (1934), Bucharest (1931) or Paris (1937). This year the conclave will be in Oslo.

Every member of Congress has the right to vote for officers of the American section of the Union, but so stereotyped has the procedure become in recent years that yesterday's meeting was called for the small room of the library committee in the Capitol.

But at the appointed hour, House Republicans were filling the room to overflowing, so the meeting was adjourned to the larger District committee room—and even that was crowded. When the tumult and the shouting died, it was discovered that the Republicans had swamped Senator Barkley, who had neglected to rally his cohorts, by a vote that approximated 60 to 6.

Other Officers Elected

Besides President Fish, new officers include Senator Burke (Democrat), vice president; Senator Barkley and Representatives Short (Republican), Knutson (Republican), and Caldwell (Democrat), on the executive committee. Representative Sol Bloom (Democrat), was ousted as treasurer in favor of Representative Fritz G. Lanham (Democrat.) Other officers include Senator White (Republican), and Representative McReynolds (Democrat), vice presidents; Representative Eaton (Republican), secretary and five Democrats and five Republicans on the executive committee (last year the committee had five Democrats and three Republicans.) Dr. A. D. Call was renamed permanent executive secretary for the nineteenth year.

That President Fish takes his new duties seriously was indicated in a statement he issued shortly after election:

"The Interparliamentary Union aims to promote the representative and parliamentary systems of government which are now under attack by the autocracies, despotisms and dictatorships. It has for one of its main objectives the promotion of peace through arbitration and the substitution of mediation and conciliation for war, and a better understanding of the principles of international law."

Eugene Meyer Receives Civil Award Tomorrow

Annual award of the Cosmopolitan Club's distinguished service medal which this year goes to Eugene Meyer, publisher of The Washington Post, will feature tomorrow's meeting of the club at 12:30 p. m. in the Shar-Zad Room of the Carlton.

Dr. J. Rozier Biggs, chairman of the club's medal committee, will make the presentation and the ceremonies will be broadcast over Station WRC. Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, Engineer Commissioner Lieut. Col. David McCoach, jr., Bishop James E. Freeman, Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, and other notables have accepted invitations, including four former medal winners, Robert V. Fleming, E. C. Graham, Thomas P. Littlepage and Maj. Ernest W. Brown.

The medal is awarded for "the most outstanding act of civic service during the past year" and Meyer won the award for his work in organizing and supporting the Criminal Justice Association.

Leduc Pleads Not Guilty in Slaying Of Grandmother, 72

Providence, R. I., Jan. 17 (AP).—Brought back from Swainsboro, Ga., where he surrendered in the slaying of his 72-year-old grandmother, Mrs. Anna Baker, Elmer Leduc, 19, of Woonsocket, was arraigned and pleaded innocent today to a first-degree murder charge.

The youth, who is a nephew of Ellery W. Baker, of Washington, was held without bail for trial January 31.

Police said he signed a confession describing bludgeoning his grandmother with a milk bottle and choking her to death and robbing her of $13.35 and a gold watch which he later pawned in New York for $1.

Virginians Mark Generals' Birthdays at Society Function

More than 1,500 persons assembled at the Virginia State Society party last night at the Willard where homage was paid to Gen. Robert E. Lee and Gen. Stonewall Jackson, whose birthdays are this month. Speakers were Maj. J. Knowles Hanson, of the National Park Service, and State Senator John Rust, of Fairfax, both of whom affirmed the necessity for a monument to Gen. Jackson at the scene of his greatest victory, the First Battle of Manassas. Among those at the dance were (left picture) Patricia Sayler, of Washington, with Winfree Lee, of Richmond. In other picture are T. S. Settle (left), former president of the society and entertainment chairman; Col. Peter Pierre Smith, 95-year-old Confederate veteran, of Washington, who was guest of honor, and Mr. Hanson.

3,500 Acclaim Meisle-Crooks In JointConcert

Metropolitan Stars Climax Evening of Song With Trovatore Duet

By Jay Walz.

Miss Kathryn Meisle and Richard Crooks, from New York's Metropolitan Opera, treated 3,500 Washington concert enthusiasts to a musical double-header last night in Constitution Hall.

The joint recital was a co-operative enterprise; in fact, after making their individual contributions to the evening's entertainment, both artists stepped forward to bring things to a spirited climax with the duet from Verdi's "Il Trovatore," "Home to Our Mountains."

Arias From Operas

It wasn't altogether an operatic evening, but both the contralto and the tenor gave arias from roles in which they frequently appear. There were excerpts from "Le Prophete," "Samson and Delila," "Carmen" and "L'Arlesiana."

For one of his most interesting operatic groups, however, Mr. Crooks went beyond the realm of the Metropolitan's repertoire. He sang very beautifully three arias from Handel, the gifted composer of the eighteenth century: "Where'er You Walk," from "Semele;" "Alma Mia," from "Floridante" and "Sound an Alarm," from "Judas Maccabaeus." He also sang with dramatic force "Frederick's Lament," from Cilea's "L'Arlesiana."

His English group did not contain his most difficult songs, but they showed something about Mr. Crook's singing that the more spectacular pieces in foreign tongues could not reveal to an English speaking audience; Mr. Crooks is a fine enunciator of his native language. In a song recital, the singing is probably the thing—but the words, when well spoken, do help put the music over.

Miss Meisle Wins Acclaim

Miss Meisle won her share of the evening's acclaim singing sympathetically and with a warm, mellow voice a wide variety of selections ranging from opera arias to folk song and humorous ditty. With a high degree of polish she sang three Hugo Wolff songs: "Frussrise," "Verschwiegene Liebe," and "Ich hab' in Penna." She was at her lyric best in a later group that included Ferrata's "Night and the Curtains Drawn," and "Dodo," a song dedicated to her by the composer, Paxson.
